Joseph "was a man famous for his muscular power, and had few equals in farming. He presented the congregation of Middlebush with an acre of land upon which the church was erected, and in the labor he personally bestowed upon the building excelled all the other workmen." (Judge Ralph Voorhees in "Our Home.") After the death of Elizabeth, Joseph's wife, her sister, Adeline Wyckoff, who was blind from sixteen years of age and who delighted herself by writing verses, usually of a pious nature, composed a poem of 119 verses upon the death of Elizabeth, beginning as follows:

"Died July nineteenth, '24,
Elizabeth Van Doren,
Thirty and seven her age and year
When carried to the tomb.

"'Twas three long years did she declare Consumptive she had been
In Jersey New, near Brunswick, too
Her residence was seen."

The verses are curious, to say the least.

Joseph's will, of Jan. 6, 1863, was probated Dec. 6, 1865. The will of his wife, Sarah C., dated Sept. 27, 1853, was probated Nov. 11, 1854.

Oct. 27, 1904. Mr. Van Doren was city gauger for N. Y. City, and then obtained the appointment of Government inspector of liquid weights and measures in Jersey City. While acting in both capacities, a former employee, James D. Oram, shot and instantly killed Mr. Van Doren in the latter's office at 40 Beaver St., N. Y. City. The N. Y. "Sun," in its account of the affair, stated that Mr. Oram called on Mr. Van Doren in the afternoon, and had a struggle with him. "Mr. Van Doren was the larger man, and, during the affray, Oram drew a five-barreled revolver and fired two shots, one of which pierced Mr. Van Doren's heart." The "Sun" added that "Mr. Van Doren was highly esteemed, having held a prominent position in political circles, and was a large, fine-looking man. Mr. Oram was about thirty-two years of age." From a relative it is learned that Mr. Oram had formerly been a clerk in Mr. Van Doren's office and had conceived himself aggrieved, but that his reasons were entirely frivolous.

During the War Mr. Van Doren acted as Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue for four years, and in earlier life was township clerk, before Washington was incorporated. He once had a cigar factory. It is said of him that, in consequence of a vow made in 1856, when John C. Fremont was running for president, that he would not shave until Fremont was elected; he has since worn a full beard. He is a great pedestrian; in 1902 walking to Wilkesbarre, a distance of 90 miles, in two days, and frequently making similar, though shorter, trips. Always in perfect health, he never found need for a physician. His keen eye and mind for detecting fraudulent doers when he was in the internal revenue business gave him the soubriquet of "Hawk-Eye," which has ever since clung to him. When seventy-two years of age he was still making daily trips to New York, leaving home at five o'clock in the morning. In many ways he has been a remarkable man.

She was also called on the records "Mayke Christiaan," probably from the name of a first husband. (For some remarks as to her, see Chap. III.) The following facts concerning Pieter van Deventer and his descendants have, in the main, been gathered by Mr. C. O. Vandevanter, chief engineer of the United Railways and Electric Co., of 618 Continental Trust Bldg., Baltimore, Md.:

Pieter van Deventer was descended from Jan van Deventer, who came to this country in the ship "Good Hope," reaching New Amsterdam in April, 1662. He was accompanied by his wife, Engel Teunis, and three children, aged nine, six and four years. The late Teunis G. Bergen says he came from Steght. Jan van Deventer settled on Long Island and was, in 1673, a Schepen of New Utrecht. The names of his three children, who came to this country with him, were Pieter Jansen, Femmetje and Jacob, and he had one son, Cornelius, born in this country. The names are usually given in the order above.

Pieter Jansen van Deventer, who married "Maytie Christiaan" (as per Onderdonck Brooklyn records), or Mayke van Doorn, according to a later baptismal record, was, in 1697, a deacon in the Reformed Dutch church of New Utrecht, L. I., having become a member of that church in 1677. In 1686 he was resident at Marteman's Neck, and, apparently, he was in New York City in 1704, when his twin children were baptised. In 1703, however, he was certainly in Monmouth co., as on May 1 of that year he gave in earmarks for his cattle. In 1709 he was made an elder of the Reformed Dutch church of Middletown and Freehold (now Marlborough), which was organized in that year; and the same year his son Jacob was baptised there.

The names of all the children of Pieter and Maria van Deventer are not known, but among them were the following:

Children:

Christian van Deventer, bap. at Flatbush, N. Y., Mar. 29, 1687. In this record the mother's name is given as "Maitie Cristiaan."

Maria van Deventer (supposed), bap. at Flatbush Apr. 16, 1688. In the record the name of the child is torn out, but it is presumed to have been Maria.

Abraham van Deventer, of Monmouth co., N. J., bap. in New York City Aug. 16, 1704. (Doubtless between the dates 1688 and 1704 there were other children born, of whom no record has been discovered.) Abraham died in 1733, as his will of Apr. 25, 1733, proved Dec. 8, 1733, indicates. (Trenton Wills.)

In this will he names his wife, "Alche," his son Peter, and his "wife's daughter, Mary Van Dorn." He also refers to his father-in-law, "Cornelius Cownover," and to his brother Isaac. He married (about), 1731, the widow of William Van Dorn (2189), who was Altje Couwenhoven. After Abraham's death, his widow married, for the third time, Feb. 22, 1739, Cornelius Middagh. Abraham's descendants have not been traced.

Isaac van Deventer (twin), of Hunterdon co., N. J., and Virginia, bap. in N. Y. City Aug. 16, 1704; m. Saartje Couwenhoven (sister of Altje, who m. his brother Abraham). Isaac lived near White Post (Whitehouse(?), Hunterdon co., N. J.), from 1732 to (about) 1757, when he removed to Pennsylvania, and thence to Loudoun co., Va., where he died. He and his children, Jacob, Abraham and Margaret, were in Virginia in 1767, while his son Peter was in Huntingdon co., Pa., in 1770. The family seem to have early emigrated to Bucks co., Pa., and thence to Virginia, as a lease of a plot of ground in Bucks co. in possession of Mr. C. O. Vandevanter, dated 1764, executed by Isaac and witnessed by Peter, would indicate. Ch.:

They resided in the neighborhood of New Brunswick and Six-Mile-Run, where their first four children were baptized, and about 1754 removed to Bedminster twsp., Somerset Co., on land formerly a part of the "Peapack patent." About 1763 they removed to near Clover Hill. Mrs. Nevyus was remarkable for her longevity and for her vigor even after she was 90 years of age. In the family of the writer there is a black knit shawl, which was knit by Mrs. Nevyus when she was ninety, and which was presented to the writer's mother at that time. It shows great skill and exactness in its workmanship, and is in perfect preservation, although made about eighty-nine years ago. In 1784 Mr. Nevyus was assessed on 183 acres of land, and then had in his family three slaves. He wrote his name "Nevyus," but it was properly "Nevius," as his children spelled it. (For some documents relating to Peter Nevyus and further particulars of his descendants than appears below, see "Johannes Nevius and his Descendants," p. 543.)

The writer has known Mr. Van Doren for many years as one of those pushing, wide-awake, up-to-date young men, who, in America, "fitly constitute the state." His success in life is a good example of what pluck and perseverance will accomplish, as the following outline features of his career to date will indicate:

In 1873 his parents removed to Washington, D. C., in which city he attended school from his sixth to his fourteenth year, when he obtained employment as a messenger boy in the United States Geological New Hampshire and New York, and the coal, iron and phosphate re-Survey. Spare time study gained for him a knowledge of stenography, leading to promotion to a confidential clerkship. Special evening studies fitted him for further advancement in 1894 to a minor position on the topographic corps of the U. S. Geological Survey, where for five years he was engaged in mapping the mountain and lake regions of Maine, Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama. In 1899 he obtained a position in the office of the Controller of the Currency, Treasury Department, where he became familiar with the national banking system and the laws governing its operations, being engaged in reviewing reports of national bank examiners and writing letters of admonition and instruction to delinquent national banks. A year later was promoted to a clerkship in the Bureau of Steam Navigation, but, finding the work routine and uncongenial, requested and received a transfer, going to the Bureau of Immigration; and, almost coincident therewith, was selected as one of the confidential stenographers on the personal staff of the Secretary of the Treasury, remaining in this position until after the retirement of Secretary Gage, when he found congenial occupation in the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury—the chief accounting office of the government. Following this experience, he received an appointment in the office of the Collector of Customs, port of New York, and for four months improved the opportunities there presented of studying the practical work of collecting the customs revenues. In March, 1903, he was recalled to Washington and appointed private secretary to the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of Customs administration, remaining in this position until the summer of 1905. During his incumbency of this office he was appointed secretary of a Commission which, in 1903, investigated the administration of customs matters at the port of New York, and was also repeatedly called to special duty on the personal staff of Secretary of the Treasury, Leslie M. Shaw, whom he accompanied on extensive campaign and inspection trips throughout the northwestern and central states, and was also selected as a member of President Roosevelt's party on the trip to the northwest in 1904. In July, 1905, he was appointed a special agent of the Treasury Department to investigate customs frauds, being assigned to duty successively in Washington, D. C., Boston, Mass., and New York City. In April, 1907, he was appointed secretary and acting chief clerk to the U. S. Customs Appraiser, port of New York, for the purpose of carrying on special work, at the conclusion of which, in July, 1907, he was reappointed a special agent of the Treasury Department and assigned to duty at the Custom House, New York City, where he is charged with the important duty of investigating and determining the repayment of customs duties, under the drawback laws of the United States, to American manufacturers who use duty-paid materials in the manufacture of exported articles.

1818. NELLY VAN DOREN, of Middlebush, N. J., dau. of Christian (447), b. there May 15, 1737; d. Aug. 12, 1796; m. (about), 1761, Jaques Voorhees (s. of Abraham L. Van Voorhees and Jannetje Minnes), who was bap. Dec. 18, 1733, and d. Mar. 14, 1792.

Judge Ralph Voorhees in "Our Home," p. 469, says this of him: "Jaques was born with a crooked foot, and being unable to walk traveled about over the country or his farm on horseback or in his phaeton. Although a cripple he was a man of unusual enterprise and perseverance. Besides managing the affairs of a large farm successfully and discharging the duties of county treasurer for a long time, he dealt much in government money during and succeeding the Revolution, in which he was charged by some with over-shrewdness in his dealings. After the Revolution he was a partner with Col. Nelson, of New Brunswick, in owning a vessel called the 'Favorite,' which plied between that place and the Island of Madeira, importing produce and bringing wine. Jaques kept a store in the east end of his large house, in the cellar of which was constantly stocked with different wines." The Judge then names some of his patrons in wines, taken from the account book, showing that in 1792 Governor Patterson purchased one pipe of London wine for £65.5.0, Richard Stockton one pipe for £60, James Parker one-half pipe for £30, Andrew Kirkpatrick one-half pipe for £32, and Rev. Dr. John Witherspoon, 27 gallons, for £20. Various accounts of Jaques in connection with his store are in the author's possession. From these it would seem that he was accustomed to spell his name "Voorheese."

The original farm of Jaques contained 300 acres and was part of the Harrison tract purchased Mar. 4, 1726, of Jacques Cortelyou, of New Utrecht, L. I., by Abraham Voorhees, father of Jaques, for £475. Jaques inherited the farm from his father. After the death of Jaques it was inherited by his son, Jaques, who married Dinah Stryker. The next owner was his son, Jaques, who married Ann Van Liew. As he died without a will the farm was divided into smaller tracts and sold, the homestead part falling into the hands of John J. Voorhees, after whose death it was purchased by his son, John A. Voorhees, who is now in possession, he being the Voorhees family owner of the sixth generation. The homestead contains now about 160 acres. The old Dutch built house upon it, although then in good state of preservation, was taken down about 1854, and a large two-story house erected in its place.

The will of Jaques, dated Mar. 22, 1792, proved Apr. 30, 1792, shows that he was then the owner of 282 acres of land. He mentions in it his sons Jaques and Abraham, daughter Aeltje (Quick), and his wife Nelly, who was then living. His executors were his wife, son Jaques, Cornelius Tenbroeck, of Harlingen, and Abraham Van Doren,

"of Rocky Hill," the latter doubtless being Abraham (20). (Trenton Wills, Book 34, p. 78.)

Mr. Van Doren first resided at Neshanic. In 1784 he became a member of the Millstone church, and in 1785, and again in 1803, he was made an elder of that church. He is probably the same who, on May 14, 1785, purchased 520 acres on the east side of the Millstone river; also on June 6, 1796, 30 acres, and on June 1, 1797, 86 acres, these lands costing him in all £2,356. He is also probably the same who served in the Revolutionary War with record as follows: "Private in Capt. Peter D. Vroom's company, and Capt. John Ten Eyck's company, 2nd Battallion, Somerset co., Militia." His will, dated Oct. 14, 1820, was probated Dec. 14, 1820 (Somerset Wills, Book D, p. 380). His widow, Frances, has also a will of record, dated Aug. 27, 1832, and probated Apr. 17, 1833.

1876. PETER VAN DORN, of near Hillsdale, N. J., s. of Jacob (1128), b. there July 4, 1755; d. Apr. 18, 1834; m., Jan. 9, 1777, Jane Williamson (dau. of Elbert Williamson and Willemtje Schenck), who was b. July 5, 1758, and d. Jan. 28, 1845. He resided on the homestead of his father, Jacob, and was the grandfather of the late Daniel P. Van Dorn, of Freehold, N. J. He is described as "a short, stout and very energetic man," of "a very kindly disposition." He was an eminently pious man, and during his life one of the pillars of the Marlborough church of which he was an elder at different times, first in 1785 and last in 1815. He wrote his signature as follows:

In 1779 he is found on a list of 436 Monmouth co. citizens who formed an association to defend the frontiers of the county and join the militia whenever the county should be invaded; also to abide by certain rules to place disaffected persons in prison, "and treat them with British rigor." The latter referred to parties of refugees from the county who returned and committed depredation. (See Barber's "Historical Collections of N. J.," p. 371).

He served in the Revolution, his record being as follows:

"Enlisted June 26, 1776, as private, Captain Thomas Hunn's Company, First Regiment, Monmouth County New Jersey Militia, Colonel George Taylor, and served six monthly tours, 1776 and 1777; Private Captain John Schenck's Company, First Regiment, Monmouth County New Jersey Militia, Colonels Nathaniel Scudder and Asher Holmes; enlisted Summer of 1777, and served twelve monthly tours in 1777 and 1778; in engagement at Conascunk, Monmouth County, New Jersey, and at battle of Germantown, Pennsylvania, October 4, 1777; afterward served as Private in sundry tours in the First Regiment, Monmouth County New Jersey Militia, Colonel Asher Holmes, in Companies commanded by Captain Moses Sheppard, one month; Lieutenant Barnes Bennett, two months; Captain Samuel Carhart, six months; Captain Joseph Stillwell, six months; Captain Hendrick Smock, one month; Captain Thomas Walling, one month; served to the end of the Revolutionary War."

For his services in this war he drew a pension after Mar. 4, 1832.

A descendant, Mrs. G. W. Vickers, of Phœnix, Ariz. ,gives an interesting tradition of the family to the effect that, "when the war broke out, although Jacob, Peter's father, was over seventy years old, as he was possessed of one of the largest gristmills in Monmouth co., he contracted to furnish flour for the American army, and that Peter with his men and teams did the carting to Amboy, Trenton and elsewhere to supply the army. Part of the time this flour was furnished without remuneration. Once on the road to Amboy Peter and his wagon train were attacked by British scouts. Peter had three men as assistants. They beat off the British, drove them to the woods, remained there all night, and the next day deposited their loads on board of boats at Amboy."

His will, dated Nov. 28, 1831, proved May 5, 1834 (Monmouth Wills, Book C, p. 369), provided: (1) that if his preperty proved to be in excess of $5,000, then $1,000 should be paid his wife in lieu of her dower; (2) small bequest to daughter Jane; (3) to his daughters Mary Smock, Williampe, wife of Dr. Benjamin Debois, "now of Ohio," Jane, wife of Elisha Holmes, and Sarah, wife of Pearson Hendrickson, each $500; and (4) to sons Peter and Arthur each $1,000. His executors were his sons William and Isaac P. In his will he made no mention of his old eight-day clock, which was inventoried at $40. His son-in-law, Elisha Holmes, purchased it; and, at the auction sale after the latter's death, it was bought by the late Hon. Daniel P. Van Dorn for $100, and is now in the possession of his family. Peter's homestead was purchased by Elisha Holmes for $16,050, and one-half of it was sold later for $28,000. (See p. 57, ante.)

Mr. Van Dorn removed with his parents in 1824 to Ludlowville, N. Y.; in 1828 to Brooksgrove, near Mt. Morris, N. Y., and in 1865 purchased the farm at Mt. Morris, now occupied by his son Edgar. While a farmer he had a natural gift for carpentry, and built his own house, as well as the house of his brother John (1287), at Towanda, Pa., and aided to build the Brooksgrove Church. One who knew him well wrote of him in the year 1906: "Peter Van Dorn was a true type of the family, reverting in physique and personal qualities to the early Van Dorns. He was a log-cabin and prairie-schooner boy of scant education and tireless industry. In his youth he was noted as a cradler of grain, which was the great accomplishment in those days. Almost a pigmy in stature, he 'honeycombed' the 'Big Alleghenian' in a grain-cradling contest on the River Road in 1851, and 'bushed' George and Rob Williams, the town champions, who worked in relief, long before the sun set. His six-foot swath was a pattern for a giant. The last of the pioneer Dutchmen of Mount Morris, who were so numerous three-quarters of a century ago, Peter Van Dorn, now in his 87th year, is a rugged and active old man."

He is a member of the Holland Society of New York City, and has been active in musical circles in Princeton. He is also greatly interested in golf as a pastime and in the laying out of golf links.

1889. Peter Aaron Van Dorn, judge, of Port Gibson, Miss., s. of Aaron (2), b., at Peapack, N. J., Sept. 12, 1773; d. Feb. 12, 1837;

m. (as his second wife, name of first wife being unknown), Aug. 18, 1811, Sophia Donelson Caffery, who was b., in Tennessee, Mar. 22, 1792. Mrs. Van Dorn's mother was Mary Donelson, of Nashville, Tenn., sister to Mrs. Andrew Jackson, wife of General Andrew Jackson. Mrs. Van Dorn was a granddaughter of Col. John Donelson, of General Washington's staff, and also an aunt of Senator Caffery, of Virginia. "In appearance she was a fair brunette, with dark hair and eyes." The Donelson family had gone from Virginia to Tennessee, and from there into Louisiana and Mississippi.

Judge Van Dorn graduated at Princeton in 1795, and, after his marriage, moved to some place in Virginia, where he lost his first wife, by whom he had no children. He then removed to Mississippi, taking up his residence at Vicksburg and becoming a lawyer of high reputation. He signed his name "Peter A. Vandorn." He eventually became a Judge of the Probate Court. He was also clerk of the Circuit Court. He spent his last years at Port Gibson. He was the father of the noted Confederate General, Earl Van Dorn.

I regret to have been unable to secure a fuller sketch of Judge Van Dorn, although the following from his daughter, Mrs. Miller, is interesting: "My old grandmother said 'Peter was of no account, and would not work on the farm,' so it was determined he 'should be a preacher.' He was, therefore, sent to Princeton, where he took a classical and theological course, and when he got through he said he 'could preach, but couldn't pray.' He bade adieu to New Jersey and removed to the Territory of Mississippi, where he was chosen or elected Judge of the Orphan's court for life, but this office he resigned some time before his death. I have a quaint old oil painting of my father taken by a French artist in New Orleans over 100 years ago. It is in powdered hair and ruffles. He sent it to his parents and in 1876, when on a visit to New Jersey, it was given to me." Mrs. Miller is mistaken as to her father's theological course at Princeton, although his parents may have intended he should take it; or he may have entered the Seminary for a short time only.

Speaking of the residence of Judge Van Dorn, Mrs. Miller, in her work entitled "A Soldier's Honor," says: "The Hill was a rare old place. The Judge had built the almost square double brick mansion after a simple model adapted to comfort, ventilation and sunlight; one arrangement being unique in having at the top of each window a space filled in with Venetian slats without glass. * * * There were two porches forming front entrances and a large covered porch at the side with colonial pillars and stationary seats. Paved walks led from the carriage-way to the porches, each walk lined with rows of gay jonquils that in springtime looked like troops of yellow-plumed cavalry drawn up for inspection. On the left was the garden with its terraces, grape arbors, jasmine, roses of every name, flanked by flowers of every hue and perfume; and hidden from view by the horticultural display were the more useful beds of vegetables and fruits, carefully tended by a German gardener. On the same side was the winding carriage-way through a grove of stately poplars."

The Judge was a Mason of high degree, "a man of unswerving integrity, unimpeachable veracity, and redoubtable courage, with a quaint humor that made him a pleasing acquisition to any circle. The older people of the state never tired of recounting his witty sayings, anecdotes and amusing jests." His grandson, Hon. Clement Sulivane, of Cambridge, Md., who was a distinguished officer of the C. S. A., gives some interesting reminiscences of the Judge, as related to him many years ago:

"Having married a niece of the wife of Andrew Jackson, and being thus quite nearly connected with the General, the house of the Judge on the hill, overlooking Port Gibson, used to be one of General Jackson's stopping-places, as the latter would journey from Nashville to New Orleans and return. I used to hear my mother tell of the impression made on her mind by that celebrated character. There are two anecdotes of the Judge's humor that I recall. On one occasion, during a recess of court, he took dinner at the hotel at Port Gibson. He was an undersized man, with a large abdomen. On this occasion, as he was walking up and down after dinner in front of the hotel, he happened to hear a stranger enquire: 'Who is that little man, strutting up and down there?' Judge Van Dorn at once turned, and said to him: 'I am Judge Van Dorn, Sir, and if you had eaten as much turkey for dinner as I had, you would gobble.' Another concerns his residence. The town of Grand Gulf, containing some 2700 inhabitants, was built on a dead level flat, formed years ago by the Mississippi River current at the foot of the high hills overlooking the plains. The highest point of the hills was one of the few rocky places in the state, and, it having deflected the river, the plain was formed on which Grand Gulf was built. Judge Van Dorn bought this hill and built a house upon it, and his friends laughed at him. They dubbed it 'Van Dorn's Folly.' I was down there in a military way in 1862, and found the whole town had been washed away with the exception of two houses right at the foot of the hill. When I was there two months later, only two chimneys were standing. A Confederate battery had fired on a U. S. transport from 'Van Dorn's Folly' and the latter had bombarded the two houses into splinters. So, of old Grand Gulf, 'Van Dorns' Folly' alone survives. Another anecdote occurs to me. He was accustomed to ride Circuit from Port Gibson to Natchez, forty miles away, and always spent the night at a half-way inn kept by a notorious gossip, Mrs. ———. They became great friends, the Judge by his bonhommie having found favor in the eyes of the landlady. On one occasion he arrived at supper time, and was at once accosted with the inquiry, as to what was the news in Port Gibson. 'What, haven't you heard!' said he. 'No, what?' said she. 'Why, some days ago a baby was born there near the bridge, half black,' he rejoined. 'You don't tell me!' quoth she. 'One-half black!' 'Yes.' he replied, 'from the head down to the waist.' 'Well, well, well,' she cried; 'did anybody ever hear of the like!' 'And,' continued the Judge, 'the most wonderful part of it was, that the other half was black, too.' She at once went for him with her broomstick, which she had been using when he rode up, and he was obliged to retreat into the inn."

In 1839 Mr. and Mrs. Van Doren removed to Sangamon Co., Ill., and remained there during their lifetime. When they settled there the country was wild prairie land with timber near the streams. Here they worked and there being no stores were compelled not only to raise the material but manufacture their clothing and other goods. Mr. Van Doren was very widely known as "Uncle Peter;" was a member of the M. E. church from childhood, and was very religious, sober, industrious and good-natured. His grandson, William L. Van Doren (2299), says: "My grandfather loved to gather a lot of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren around him, and tell them about grandparents many times removed who came so near being eaten on board a sailing vessel on the voyage to America. At the time of his death he had something over 50 grandchildren, and 25 or 30 great-grandchildren."

His granddaughter, Mrs. Seely A. Robinson, of St. Louis, Mo.,

wrote concerning Mrs. Van Doren: "Her great-grandparents on the mother's side bore the name of Rogers. They emigrated from Ireland, and, soon after the vessel sailed, Mr. Rogers died at sea. A violent storm caused the destruction of the ship's stores, and, in order to sustain life, three of the passengers were in turn killed and eaten. Mrs. Rogers had been selected by lot as the next one to be slain. She asked for one hour to pray, which was granted, and all the preparations made for taking her life, the ship meanwhile carrying signals of distress. When but a few minutes of the time remained, the sound of a cannon came booming over the waters, conveying the glad tidings that they were discovered, and her life was spared. On arriving in America she settled in Warren Co., Ohio, with her only daughter Elizabeth, who married Patrick Meloy. Their daughter, Amy Meloy, married Ebenezer Hathaway, and their daughter, Margaret Hathaway, married Peter C. Van Doren." She adds: "Mr. and Mrs. Van Doren's descendants, including those married into the family, now number 132 or more. The name in the family is synonymous for piety, honesty, industry and sobriety. While none have been remarkable for wealth or position, neither has there been any kind of disgrace attached to one. In all my life I never heard Grandfather Van Doren say a harsh or angry word."

Dr. Van Doren graduated from Madison University, N. Y. (now Colgate Univ.), in 1875, and from Hamilton Theol. Sem., 1878. His pastorates have been as follows: Bath-on-Hudson, N. Y., Apr., 1878-Apr., 1883; Oak Park, Ill., May, 1883-June, 1888; Vermillion, So. Dak., Apr., 1890-Aug., 1897; Port Huron, Mich., Aug., 1897-Oct., 1901. On Oct. 1, 1901, he became editor of "The Standard," the leading denominational paper of the Baptists for the Northwest published at Chicago. In June, 1904, he received the degree of D. D. from Colgate Univ.

Dr. Van Doren stands high in the Baptist church, and at the resignation of each pastorate he was permitted to go to the newer field with the deepest regret on the part of his people. When he became attached to the staff of "The Standard," the newspapers of the denomination congratulated "The Standard" upon its accession. His pastoral work was always in the line of evangelism, but characterized by good sense and solidity. He is spoken of in the press as "a gentleman of the most pleasing type and an intelligent and sympathetic student of the work of Southern Baptists;" as possessing "a peculiarly level head, with a heart loyal to God and loving toward man;" and as a journalist having "that peculiar combination of good sense and responsiveness to public demands and sense of timeliness and proportion, which go to make up that indescribable something called 'the journalistic gift.'" No ch.

Magdalen Voorhees (dau. of Derrick Voorhees, of Hillsborough twsp., Somerset co.), who was bap. Feb. 1, 1778. In 1812 he purchased 12 acres of land in Hillsborough from Abraham Voorhees. He went to Ohio in 1836, when sixty-seven years of age; and in his later years was called "Ralph," and so wrote his name. I have supposed him to be a son of Peter (1875), because Peter had a son Roelof otherwise unaccounted for; but Roelof's first child being named John, and other circumstances, throw some doubt upon this conjecture. Derrick Voorhees, Roelof's father-in-law, has a will on record in Somerset co., N. J., date of Apr. 29, 1829.

Apr. 12, 1740, and d. Aug. 18, 1779; and (2) Maria Wyckoff (dau. of Simon Wyckoff and Alche Van Doren, 114), who was b. Sept. 12, 1766. Maria Wyckoff was a widow Probasco. William's farm was that which was recently owned by the late well-known Jacob Wyckoff, of Middlebush, and his son, Jacob, still resides upon it. On May 30, 1763, William purchased from Peter Van Nest a farm near the Bridgewater Poor Farm, north of Somerville, containing 171 acres, on which his son, Bergun, lived and died. On Feb. 1, 1774, he purchased of Margaret Thomson, widow of William Thomson, a Somerset co. attorney-at-law, two and one-half acres of land at Millstone for £410. This deed was never recorded, and is now in the possession of Mr. John A. Powelson, of Pluckamin. This latter land, described as a "valuable house and lot," was advertised at public sale in the "New York Gazette" of Mar. 4, 1776. (See N. J. Archives, Second Series, Vol. 1, p. 51).

Although William died in 1786, letters of administration on his estate were not issued until Apr. 30, 1788, when Jaques Voorhees, his nephew, became administrator. Having died without a will, his real estate descended to his children, who, in 1792, were stated to be: "Christian, and three other sons and three daughters." His son, Bergun, purchased the shares of his brothers and sister in the farm near Pluckamin.

William served in the Revolutionary War as a private in the Somerset County Militia.

The Dutch Bible owned by him in his life-time, now in the possession of the family of his great-great-grandchild, George V. N. Van Doren, of Neshanic Station, N. J., was printed in Holland in 1748, and cost, according to the price named therein £4.6.8. The name is written on the flyleaf, "William Van dorn."

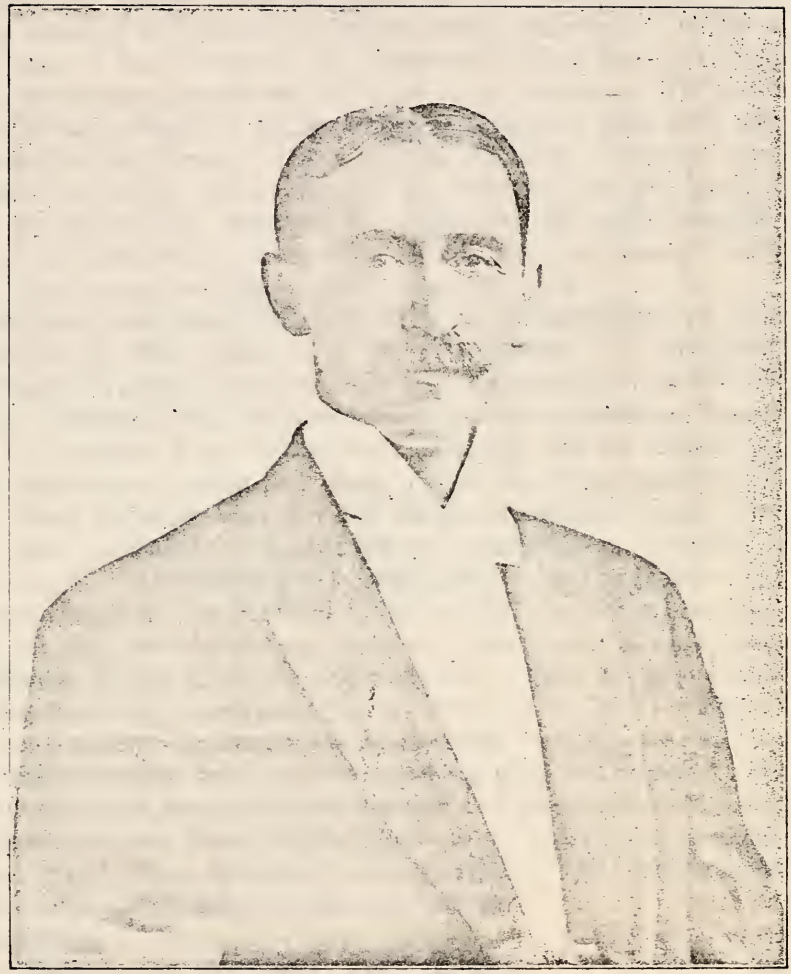
2191. WILLIAM VAN DORN, farmer, of Peapack, N. J., s. of Jacob (1128), b., near Hillsdale, N. J., Dec. 8, 1736; d. Oct. 4, 1816; m., 1760, Rachel Longstreet (dau. of Guisbert Longstreet and Rachel Schenck, of Squan, N. J.), who d. July 16, 1763, as per her tombstone in Bedminster cemetery. William Van Dorn lived on the farm north of Peapack, adjoining his brother Aaron. It was afterward owned by Henry Hillard, and then by his son, William Hillard, and is now a training school for boys to learn the practical art of farming. William seems to have purchased, May 1, 1770, of Louis Johnston and John Johnston, of Perth Amboy, 210 27-100 acres of land in Bedminster twsp., Somerset Co., the consideration being £735.18s. 9d. (Deed in Secretary of State's office, Trenton, Book G-3, p. 425). Soon after this he purchased 13 44-100 acres, probably an adjoining tract, from George Forman. (Deed in Secretary of State's office, Trenton, Book G-3, p. 437). On Aug. 28, 1811, he purchased 72 acres of land in Morris co., from Phebe Van Dorn (widow of his son, Guisbert).

William's great-granddaughter, Mrs. William E. Westervelt, of Paterson, N. J., writes that when William's son, Jacob, was married, "he took his wife to his father's home, where all Jacob's children were born. These children also grew up and married from that home.



WARREN SMALLEY VAN DOREN (2177)

Of Bound Brook, New Jersey. Born 1867; living.

The house (William's house) was burned during its occupancy by the combined families through the carelessness of the colored people in charge. While the family were listening to a long and interesting sermon in conservative Bedminster church, the colored folks were having a fine 'spread,' when the house took fire, and, by the time the family returned from church, it had burned to the ground. It was a heavy loss in both furniture and silver-ware. That home was just across the Somerset county line in Chester twsp., Morris co. The house was afterward rebuilt on the same spot, and, when I knew it, it was occupied by Isaac Crater, whose son, John A. Crater (father to Mrs. Wallace McGeorge, of Camden, N. J.), married into the family." With the house were destroyed the family records, which accounts for the fact that various dates of the two families are missing in this work, their descendants being unable to supply them.

William's will, dated Aug. 27, 1816, and probated Nov. 12, 1816 (Somerset Co. Wills, Book A, p. 181), bequeathed: (1) To grandson, Stephen Van Dorn, "my middle farm," containing 85 acres in Morris Co., "between lands I have sold to my grandsons Jacob and Peter." (2) To grandson Peter, $1800, upon condition that he support his father and mother during their lives. (3) To granddaughter "Catty," $600, when she arrives at 18. (4) To granddaughter, Peggy Voorhees, tract purchased of Jacob Hoffman, consisting of 500 acres in Scott Co., Ky. (Refers to J. H.'s deed as dated June 13, 1796). (5) To granddaughter, Ann Jeroloman, tract conveyed by Aaron Van Dorn May 16, 1816, and bought by Aaron of John Cloves Simmes, Esq., "situate on Walnut Creek Waters, a branch of Siote River in Northwestern Territory," containing 333 1-3 acres. (6) To the widow of his son Guisbert, "my negro boy Isaac, about twelve years old," till he arrives at twenty-five; "also the old riding chair and harness." (7) Executors to sell real and personal estate and divide proceeds among his grandchildren: Peter, Jacob, Stephen, and "Catty," viz.: 2 shares to each grandson and one share to granddaughter. The executors were Major John Logan and Nicholas Arrowsmith.

1839; m., Feb. 1, 1787, Maria Wyckoff (dau. of Cornelius and Sarah Wyckoff), who was b. Sept. 12, 1761, and d. May 20, 1808. It is stated that William had four wives, having married three between 1808 and the time of his death in 1839, but I have not obtained their names, and am assured he had no children by them. The third wife is said to have been named Ann, and was buried in the cemetery at Meridian, N. Y., in 1834, aged 76 years. William was also buried at Meridian.

Although it is stated that William Van Doren went from New Jersey to Cato, N. Y., in 1817, he was certainly in New York state in 1792, as in that year he gave a release to his brother, Bergun, of his interest in the farm of his father, located at Pluckemin, and which Bergun subsequently owned. The release describes him as "William Van Doren, late of Somerset Co., in the state of New Jersey, and now of the state of New York." From letters in the possession of Mr. John A. Powelson, of Pluckamin, he was in the state of New York in 1811, as he wrote from there to his sister, Alche Powelson, of Pluckamin. William's signature was as follows:

She was previously m., 1836, to Dr. D. M. Barnett, who d. 1839, by whom she had two children.

Prof. Van Doren graduated at the College of N. J., 1835; studied theology in Princeton Sem., 1836, but discontinued those studies and was professor of Columbia College, Mo., until 1836-'37; and in the Mo. State Univ., 1837-'43; principal at Lexington, Mo., 1843-'50; professor in Westminster College, Mo., 1850-'62; teacher at Napa City, Stockton and Visalia, Cal., 1862-'67; and principal at Watsonville, Cal., from 1867 until his death. His nephew, Rev. William H. Van Doren, of Griggstown, once said of him: "My uncle William, for whom I was named, was one of the grandest and purest men ever connected with the Van Doren family. Dr. Charles Hodge, and Dr. John McLean, president of Princeton College, have testified to me of his distinguished worth and excellent spirit. He has left an influence peculiarly beautiful and sweet upon all who came under his care." In the "Presbyterian Cyclopedia," by Nevin, 1884, p. 971, Prof. Van Doren is referred in the following terms: "He was a gentleman of strong and cultivated intellect, and excelled as an instructor."

At the time of his death, the "Gilroy Advocate" contained the following obituary notice: "Shortly after leaving college he visited Florida and took charge of a school. From thence he went to Columbia, Missouri, and taught in the college there, and after that institution was merged into the University he was elected Professor of Mathematics. After ten or twelve years' service, he removed to Lexington, Missouri, and opened a High School, which he successfully conducted for several years. He next appeared at Fulton, Missouri, to assist in the organization of Westminster College and to become its first Professor. He continued there, associated with the faculty, until the college was broken up by the War. He came to California in 1861, and first taught school at Napa in connection with the Rev. Veeder. He then went to Stockton, and afterwards to Visalia and Watsonville, and established seminaries of learning in each town. Many of his pupils, scattered over the country, are now distinguished professional men. He had been an active elder in the Presbyterian church for thirty-five years; was Superintendent of several Sabbath Schools and taught many Bible classes. His whole life was heartily spent in church work, and in the moral and intellectual training of the young. For over thirty years he was a prominent Free Mason. The community in which he has lived for the past ten years remember his virtues and speak of him as an upright man who ever strove to do his duty to both God and man." At his funeral he was buried with Masonic ceremonies.

Mrs. Van Doren d. at Gilroy, and is spoken of as a women of "great strength of character, practical, philosophical good sense, and an intense nature;" also that "not the least striking feature of her character was her droll humor and sparkling pleasantry in which she indulged to the great enjoyment of all who were in her circle of friends."

"At the breaking out of the Civil War, Mr. Van Dorn went out as a first lieutenant in the 69th Ohio, having lived for a number of years in Dayton, Ohio. He was transferred to the quartermaster's service, western department, and commanded a small boat, carrying one gun, presumably for patrol duty. He was captured by Gen. Forrest, during a raid, was exchanged, and became adjutant of the 8th Tennessee (Union) regiment. At the close of the War, he was made captain of the 'Nick Hughes,' a government transport. On a trip from Nashville to New Orleans, his wife went with him, his children being left at a town on the Ohio river, in Indiana (Evansville, I think), until their return. On the way back the boat blew up and sunk near Memphis. Nothing was ever heard of either of them. The lady in whose care the children were left wrote us that good homes had been found for them, since which we have heard nothing from them." (From a letter by a relative).

2232. William Aaron Van Dorn, farmer and miller, of Peapack, N. J., s. of Aaron (2), b. July 26, 1781; d. June 14, 1871; m., July 4, 1804, Elsie Sutton, who was b. May 5, 1786, and d. Dec. 21, 1858. Mr. Van Dorn was one of the most enterprising and highly esteemed citizens of Somerset Co. When 19 years of age he left home "to seek his fortune." He went to Pittsburgh, took a flat boat down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to Natchez, where he began to raise cotton. He was greatly successful, but not liking the state of society there, after two years returned home, and took charge of the mill of his father, which he subsequently purchased. He secured a post-office for Peapack, and also opened a store, carrying on milling, farming, and other branches of business. He soon became identified with all improvements of the locality, constructing the roads, building new bridges, etc. He introduced the first threshing machine in that vicinity. He was justice of the peace in 1813, and was continuously re-elected for thirty-five years. He was also appointed a lay Judge of the Common Pleas of Somerset Co. in 1836; re-elected in 1843. "He was a man of great firmness and dignity of character; his habits were temperate and all his appetites and impulses under a remarkable control. His vigor of body and mind was retained to an advanced age. When nearly 80 years of age he enlarged his water power and rebuilt his mill, superintending the getting out of the timber, and going upon the roof of the mill to see that the work was well done." He almost reached the age of 90. He was on the roster for the War of 1812. His son, Lewis, afterward owned his homestead.

On Aug. 15, 1858, there was an interesting gathering at Mr. Van Dorn's house, notable for the ages of those who attended, viz: William A. Van Dorn, aged 77; Elsie Sutton, his wife, aged 72; Gilbert Van Dorn (brother), aged 75; Magdalena Voorhees (Gilbert's wife), aged 61; Aaron Van Dorn (brother), aged 71, and Elizabeth Finley (Aaron's wife), aged 68. Combined ages of the six, 424 years.

The following, which appeared in a local newspaper, of October, 1869, has also its peculiar interest:

"Death of an Aged Negro.

"Peapack, Oct. 5, 1869.

"There died at Peapack, on Tuesday night, 28th ult., an old negro man, named Piney, aged about 76 years, who was born and lived and died in the Van Dorn family of this place. He was an honest, faithful man, and was respected by all who knew him. His funeral took place at the house of Wm. A. Van Dorn, Esq., on Thursday last, and was attended by a large collection of persons, among whom were nearly all the most respectable people in the surrounding neighborhood; but, what was remarkable, not a single colored person was present. The corpse was dressed in a suit of black clothes, put in a handsome walnut coffin (which was made to order), and placed on a bier in the hall of Mr. Van Dorn's dwelling. The Rev. H. P. Thompson, of the Ref. Church, preached a very solemn and impressive sermon from Psalms 107, 43: 'Who is wise and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord.' The bier with the coffin was then carried out and stood on the walk in front of the house, the coffin opened and the corpse viewed by the audience; after which the bier was lifted by the bearers, Moses Craig, David W. Dellicker, Morris P. Crater, Esq., G. Proster, Esq., David Apgar, and B. H. Horton, and carried to the M. E. graveyard, two or three hundred yards distant, and laid in the ground there to await the summons of his Master. To show how sincere was the respect for this old negro man, the relatives of Mr. Van Dorn residing in N. Y. were apprised of the death, and all, save one, were present at the funeral." Such a funeral was greatly to the honor of the negro's master.

He is said to have dropped the "e" in his surname, although his father was a Van Doren. In 1879 Mr. and Mrs. Van Dorn celebrated their golden anniversary, which was a notable occasion. The event occurred at the residence of their daughter, Mrs. Edward H. Salsbury. From the newspaper account of the same we glean the following:

"The aged couple were dressed in their best bib and tucker, and, seated by a brightly burning wood-fire in the fire-place, looked the picture of contentment. They were married in Indiana, in 1829, when that State was a howling wilderness. The old gentleman said that after the marriage was performed he took his bride to an Indian village close by, and spent the day with the Indians. The large and spacious parlors of the Salsbury residence were thrown open early in the evening, and were soon filled with guests. The rooms were beautifully decorated with evergreens, and on the wall, in letters of living green, were the words: 'Dec. 20, 1829; Dec. 20, 1879.' The front parlor was furnished with old-style furniture; a sofa 76 years old, a rocking chair 70 years old, and another 110 years old; a looking-glass made in 1812, and innumerable pictures that date back to the last century. This room was illuminated with tallow candles, set in massive, old-style, brass candle-sticks. The back parlor was furnished in the modern style, the walls embellished with beautiful pictures, the sofas, chairs, etc., of the latest pattern. The contrast between the two rooms was marked. The supper, which was elegant, commenced about 10:30 and continued until midnight. It was served to guests on small tables, scattered about the rooms, and consisted of roast pig, turkey, chicken, cold meats, and many varieties of cakes, etc. The large crowd assembled was received and entertained in a handsome manner by host and hostess. Rev. A. C. Williams, of the M. E. Church, united the happy couple and addressed them in a few well-chosen and appropriate words." A list of elegant presents followed the above account.

2313. William Theodore Van Doren, clergyman, of Washington, D. C., s. of Garret V. (859), b., in New York City, Nov. 28, 1819; d. in Washington, D. C., Dec. 20, 1885; m., at Princeton, N. J., Oct. 26, 1840, Jane Aletta De Graw (dau. of Abram De Graw and Elizabeth Voorhees, of New Brunswick, N. J.), who was b. Oct. 9, 1814, and d. June 7, 1899. Rev. Mr. Van Doren graduated at Rutgers College 1837, and at the New Brunswick Theological Seminary 1840, in June of which year he was licensed by the Reformed Dutch Classis of New York. Marrying the same year, he sailed with his wife in November for Borneo, they being under commission as missionaries of the Reformed Dutch church. Arriving there after a four months' voyage, they found all ports closed, and so went on to Batavia, on the Island of Java, where they supplied the mission at that point for a year and four months. Mr. Van Doren's health then failing, they started for home on an English vessel, stopping at the Island of St. Helena, where they were guests of the English consul. They were there at the time when the body of Napoleon Bonaparte was exhumed and sent to France. Mr. and Mrs. Van Doren saw the remains, and brought home a bundle of willow slips from Napoleon's grave. These slips were planted at Princeton, on what was then known as the Basin, now Carnegie Lake. From them several slips were transferred to the College campus.

Mr. Van Doren's first charge after his return was at Kingston-on-Hudson, 1842-'45; his second at Port Byron, N. Y., 1845-'48; when, his health again failing, he went to his father's farm at Millstone and supplied the Millstone Reformed church. He next engaged himself in the building of the Reformed Dutch church at Mott Haven (now in N. Y. City), where he preached 1852-'53. His subsequent charges were: Ramapo, N. J., 1853-'57; South Bend, Ind., 1857-'59. He was chaplain of the 7th Missouri Cavalry in the Civil War from 1861-'62, Mrs. Van Doren engaging with him for part of the time in hospital work. He then went to Washington to live, securing a position in the U. S. Treasury Department, which he held until his death. In the meantime he supplied churches in and around Washington, and at the time of his death was chaplain at the jail workhouse, poorhouse, etc., "being faithful to the end."

Mrs. Van Doren survived her husband for about fourteen years, residing at Washington, D. C,. "where her home on Capitol Hill was always the centre of genuine and unobtrusive hospitality, always open to gatherings, literary, charitable, social, or artistic." She was a notably kind-hearted, active and intelligent Christian lady.

Later he returned to Indiana, and in 1867 returned to Omaha, entering the employ of the Union Pacific Railroad, and was with them in the car department at the west end of the Road until the Road was completed, and the golden spikes were driven in, on May 10, 1869. He remained at Ogden in the employ of the Road until 1872, when he resigned and went into business in that city for himself. In 1880 he removed to Lincoln, where, in 1873 and later, he had purchased 50 acres of land, which he still owns, and is now a most valuable property.

Mr. Van Dorn is best known as the inventor of the "Van Dorn Automatic Coupler," for street and interurban roads, which "will couple automatically within 1-32 of an inch, and under no conditions can be disengaged in train service." To facilitate the manufacture of his patents he has spent the last twelve years in Chicago. The coupler is now known all over the world; is in use on all the elevated railways in America and by many subways, and also by some 400 interurban roads in the country.

Part III.

LINE OF CORNELIUS DOORN, OF MONMOUTH COUNTY, NEW JERSEY

PREFATORY NOTE.

This line is known as "The Line of Cornelius Doorn" (who seems to have been a "van Doorn," as some of his early descendants recognized), because he is the known head of the line detailed in this Part of this work, and because almost nothing is known of his father, Diedlof.

As to the alphabetical arrangement of the names in Chapter VIII, and how to trace a genealogy forward or backward, see page 86, ante, as the remarks there made apply also to Chapter VIII.

The numbering of persons named in Chapter VIII is continued from preceding pages for facility of reference.

CHAPTER VII.

CORNELIUS DOORN, OF MONMOUTH COUNTY, N. J.

That Diedlof Doorn (mentioned ante, p. 32) was a van Doorn I have no doubt, but it cannot be proved from American records. The only mention of him is on the records of the Reformed Dutch Churches of New York City and Brooklyn. The first record is in Brooklyn, on Dec. 26, 1680, when it is stated that he married Elsje Jenriaens. In the New York City records he is credited with two children: Diedlof, baptised 1681, and Jenriaens, baptised Sept. 14, 1687. He undoubtedly had a son Cornelius, who was born about 1683, who heads the New Jersey line given in succeeding pages.

Diedlof appears to have had a sister Margaret, who was married to Jan Andrieszen, and died before Feb. 5, 1691, on which date Jan betrothed himself to "Marie den Rudtgers," who was herself a widow of Joris Janszen. (See p. 32). Diedlof probably died in 1688, as on July 27, 1689, his widow married Van Geesje Hendricx.

We only know of Diedlof, therefore, that he married as above stated, and had at least three children: Diedlof, Cornelius and Jenriaens. He undoubtedly resided on Long Island.

I conjecture that Diedlof was the son of Cornelius Lamberssen van Doorn of Utrecht, Holland, who came to Albany, N. Y., in 1642 (see p. 31), but of this there are no proofs.

That Diedlof was the father of Cornelius of Monmouth county is certain from the names of Cornelius' first three children, viz.: (1) Alice (usually written "Elsje"), so named from the wife of Diedlof, mother of Cornelius. (2) Joseph, named for the father of the wife of Cornelius. (3) Diedlof. This would be the natural order of names in a Dutch family, and is reasonable proof of the paternity of Cornelius.

There is no further trace of Diedlof or Jenriaens, children of Diedlof, so that what I have to say further concerning this family relates solely to the son Cornelius.

This son, Cornelius, did not write his name van Doorn, or even Doorn, although he is frequently entered as "van Doorn" upon the church records at Marlborough, N. J. It may be that his ancestors had dropped the "van" while in Holland, but it is more likely that both Diedlof, and his son Cornelius, had deemed it an unimportant appendage to bring along to this new country. His name usually appears on other than church records in Monmouth county as Cornelius Doorn, and this spelling I have followed as to himself and his children, although there is great irregularity in this respect on various records. Probably most of his grandchildren eventually wrote their name "Dorn," and "Van Dorn," but several lines of descendants in the West write it "Van Doran."

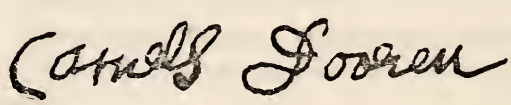
As Cornelius Doorn lived within a few miles of Jacob van Doorn (whose line is given in the preceding Part of this work), Jacob being at Hillsdale, and Cornelius at Middletown, Monmouth County, and as Cornelius was a witness at the baptism of one or more grandchildren of Jacob, it has been generally supposed that the two were closely related, perhaps brothers. This, however, could not have been the case. It is, indeed, scarcely probable that they were first cousins, the names of the children in the two families being so diverse. However, it is not improbable that there was some relationship between them.

Cornelius doubtless came from Long Island to Middletown, N. J., in or before the year 1709, when he purchased of J. Garret Wall, of the latter place, 100 acres of land. In 1720 he purchased 139 acres more in the same vicinity, and about the same time 40 acres on the Atlantic coast. His actual farm, therefore, must have consisted of about 240 acres of good land near Middletown. This land was retained in the family for perhaps a century or more, and said to be still known in the vicinity as the "Dorn farm," located about two miles from Hazlett station, (which is on the N. J. Central Railroad between Matawan and Middletown).

Cornelius was a weaver by trade, but whether he carried on his trade after he became a farmer does not appear. As previously stated, he was a near neighbor of, but much younger than Jacob van Doorn, whom he outlived some thirty-five years, as he did not die until 1755, when probably about seventy-two years of age.

Like the majority of the early Dutch immigrants Cornelius was not sufficiently educated in English to take pains as to the correct spelling of his name. He not only thought the "van" unnecessary, but wrote the name "Dooren," at least in his later years, as is plainly evidenced by his signature to his will, which is as follows:



In the same year in which he is recorded as purchasing a farm in Monmouth county, he appears upon the records of the "Reformed Congregation of Freehold and Middletown" (now the church of Marlborough) as having a wife, Anneke Golder. On February 5 of that year both names appear as the parents at the baptism of a daughter (Allicia, or Elsje; in English, Alice); in 1712 they had a child Joseph baptised; in 1713 a child Diedlof (entered on the records as Diedlo, but written in Cornelius' will as Deatlof); in 1715 a "daughter;" and in 1722 a "son," supposed to have been named Cornelius. Cornelius joined the Marlborough church in 1713, and his wife (then entered as "Anke Goulder") in 1719. He had other children, as appears by his will, but I find no other baptisms recorded at Marlborough or elsewhere.

The full facts which I have gathered from documents and records concerning Cornelius are as follows:

1709, Jan. 25. "Cornelius Dorne" is the grantee in a deed from J. Garret Wall, of Middletown, Monmouth county, for 100 acres of land in Middletown, "beginning at a brook that runs unto Joseph Dorsett, Esq., and is bounded by lands of William Hendrickson, Mr. Wallentz, Garret Wall and John Wall." The consideration was £112. (Deed recorded in 1720 at Trenton, in Book I, of Deeds, p. 482). This was undoubtedly the farm on which Cornelius afterward lived. That Cornelius was already a resident in 1709 is shown from the deed itself, where it is said that "he is of the same place as the grantor."

1709, Feb. 5. The first child of Cornelius, "Allicia," baptised at Marlborough. Parents' names entered as "Cornelius van Doorn" and "Anneke Golder." (Substantially these same spellings appear on the church books until 1715, when the father's name was entered as "Cornelis Doorn," and subsequently the "van" does not appear, as to him or his children).

1711, Apr. 2. "Cornels Doorn" appears as a witness to the will of William Hendrickson of Middletown. (N. J. Archives, Vol. 23, p. 223.).

1712, June 12. Second child, Joseph, baptised at Marlborough.

1713, Nov. 22. Third child, "Diedlo," baptised at Marlborough. The same year "Cornelis Doorn" appears as joining the church at Marlborough.

1715, Dec. 18. Fourth child, "daughter" (no name given), baptised at Marlborough.

1716, Apr. 9. In an inventory of the estate of John Bowne, merchant, of Middletown, one of the assets is a mortgage of "Cornelius Dorne." (N. J. Archives, Vol. 23, p. 51).

1719, October. "Anke Golder, wife of Cornelis Doorn," is entered as a member of the church at Marlborough.

1720, Jan. 21. He purchased of John Boyce, of Monmouth, for £95 two tracts, namely: one of 130 acres in Middletown township, adjoining Thomas Smith, John Wall, Garsham Walling, the same being north of his previous purchase; and another of nine acres, being a lot and meadow called "Wackak," adjoining John Laiton and the ocean. The deed was not recorded until May 12, 1750. (Trenton Deeds, G-2, p. 324). He also purchased of William Smith, cordwainer of Middletown, 45¾ acres, adjoining his previous tracts, bounded by Garsham Walling, Daniel Hendrickson and William Smith, being to the north of Mr. Doorn's former land, this deed being recorded May 12, 1750. In this deed Mr. Doorn's trade is mentioned as "weaver." In the deeds above mentioned his name is spelled "Dorne" and "Dorn."

1722, March 24. Fifth child, "son" (no name given), baptised at Marlborough. The name believed to be Cornelius.

1722, Mar. 28. "Then Cornelius Dorne Gave in his Ear-mark to be recorded as followeth, viz.: Two Slits Cutt in on the under side of the Right Ear." On Jan. 17, 1768, the same ear-marks were recorded for his son, Nicholas (the father having previously died). (See "Middletown Town Records").

1727, Nov. 16. Cornelius is witness to the will of Daniel Hendricks, of Middletown, name appearing as "Corneles Dooren." (N. J. Archives, Vol. 23, p. 222).

1735 and 1736. Name appears on grand juries of Monmouth Co.

1739, Nov. 4. Cornelius and Antje appear as sponsors at the baptism of Isaac, son of William Wykkof and grandson of Jacob van Doorn, at Marlborough.

1739, Oct. 14. Cornelius and Antje appear as sponsors at the baptism of Jacobus, son of "Elsje van Doorn." (There is uncertainty as to who this "Elsje" was. See remarks in Appendix XIV).

1743, Apr. 17. Cornelius and wife appear as sponsors at the baptism at Marlborough of their grandchild Cornelis, son of "Joseph Doorn" and Femmetje "Wykkof."

1746, March 16. The daughter of Cornelius, Alice, having died, her brother, "Cornelius Dorn," is appointed administrator. The papers show that she was a single woman, and that it was her brother Cornelius and not her father, who was made administrator (Trenton Records).

1748, Nov. 20. Cornelius and wife appear as sponsors at the baptism of their grandchild, Antje, daughter of Jan Clerk and Antje Doorn.

1751, Nov. 3. Cornelius and wife appear as sponsors at the baptism of their grandchild Antje, daughter of Diedlof Doorn and Styntje Vander Hoeve.

1755, Nov. 11. Cornelius makes his will. This will was probated Dec. 16,1755. (Trenton Wills, Book F, p. 304). He signs it "Cornels Dooren," being the same that has been reproduced on p. 580. This will provides for his family as follows: (1) His wife to have use of estate real and personal as long as she is his widow, and his sons, Cornelius and Nicholas, to assist and help provide for their mother. (2) His daughter, Catharine, to have house-room and firewood, as long as she remains unmarried, in the house where he dwells. (3) To his seven children is given all his movable estate, after the decease of their mother, to be equally divided; "only a horse and saddle to come out of the movables after my wife's decease, which I give to my grandson, James Wilson." (4) To two of his sons, Cornelius and Nicholas, "all my land and meadow and rights of land and other real estate;" they to pay £50 to his son Joseph one year after the mother's death, to be in full bar of all of Joseph's claims as heir, except movable estate; £70 to his son Deatluf, one year later; £50 to his daughter Elinor three years after the mother's decease; £45 to his daughter Anne, four years after the mother's decease; £50 to his daughter Catherine, five years after the mother's decease; £20 to his grandson, James Wilson, six years after the mother's decease. (5) If either Cornelius or Nicholas shall die without issue, their share of land and meadow shall fall to the survivors of them. (6) The executors to be his sons Deatluf, Cornelius and Nicholas. The witnesses to the will were John Wall, Jr., Cornelius Vanderbelt, John Bowne.

1767, Sept. 19. The widow of Cornelius dies, aged, according to her tombstone, "about 86 years."

I wish I could say more of Cornelius, but the records are too meagre. He was evidently a plain, God-fearing and trusted farmer. His descendants may well honor his memory as one of the sturdy pioneers in the building up of Middletown and of the Dutch church in Monmouth county 200 years ago. His burial-place was, no doubt, in the "Golden Burying-ground" near Middletown, where his wife's grave is marked by a stone, but at present it is undesignated.

THE WIFE OF CORNELIUS.

The wife of Cornelius, called Anneke, or Anke, Golder, is believed to have been of English descent. She was really a Golding (Ann Golding), the daughter of Joseph Golding of Gravesend, Long Island, who is on record as residing in that town in 1664. The Dutch called the name "Golder," and as "Golder" and "Goulder" and "Goolder" it was written by Dutch ministers. She was born in 1682, as appears on the records at Gravesend. She had a brother Joseph, born in 1675, who married (1) Anneke Daws, and (2) Adrianje Lane; another brother William, born in 1677, and a third brother Nicholas, born in 1679. From two of these brothers, Joseph and Nicholas, we may be sure that the names of two of Cornelius' male children originated. Antje's father, Joseph, signed his name to documents "Joseph Golding," but not so other members of the family.

Joseph Golding, the father of Antje, probably never removed to Monmouth county, but it is certain that his son Joseph was there in 1704, when he purchased a farm near Middletown, and in 1709 he joined the Dutch church of Middletown and Freehold (Marlborough). It is probable that Sara Golding, who married Johannes Tuyse and resided near Freehold, was a sister to Joseph Golding, Jr., and Antje Doorn.

The widow of Cornelius Doorn lived until Sept. 19, 1767, when she died, aged "about 86 years." Her tombstone is in the "Golden Burying-ground," her name thereon being spelled "Doern," if the same has been correctly read.

CHILDREN OF CORNELIUS DOORN.

So far as ascertained, Cornelius Doorn had nine children, viz.:

1. ALICE, sometimes written Elsje, baptised 1709. She died in 1746 unmarried, as previously stated.

2. JOSEPH, baptised 1712, who married in 1739 Femmetje Wykkof. Joseph resided near Middletown and had children, viz.: Jacob, Cornelis, Antje, Wilmpye, Joseph and Petrus. He probably had others whose names are not ascertained, and without doubt they have various descendants scattered over the country of the name of Dorn.

3. DIEDLOF, sea captain, baptised 1713, who married Styntje Vander Hoeve, and died about 1755. He had children, Antje and Michael, and I have assumed that Cornelis Van Dorn (2366), of Jamesburgh, was another, although I have been unable to verify it.

4. ELEANOR, usually called "Nelly," probably born in 1715. She married in 1742, the well known Hendrick K. Wilson, of Somerset county, a noted patriot and official in the Revolution, but died young, and probably had but one son, James Wilson.

5. ANNE, born about 1718, who married in 1741, John Clerk. The name was afterward changed to "Clark," and they had children: Cornelis, Alexander, Cornelis (second), Antje, Antje (second), Nicholas and Leah.

6. CORNELIUS, of Freehold, baptised 1722. He was a blacksmith and probably was unmarried, but this is uncertain.

7. NICHOLAS, of Middletown, N. J., b. (about) 1724, died (about) Jan., 1796, who is known to have married, in 1761, Sarah Smith. He probably had a previous wife. The subject of his family is taken up infra.

8. CATHERINE, born (about) 1726, who married, 1762, John Tipples, and perhaps afterward married Hugh Newell, of Burlington county, N. J.

9. RULOF (supposed), born (about) 1728, who married, 1749, Christina Vander Hoeve. He resided near New Brunswick, and probably died soon after his marriage, leaving only two or three children.

What is known of the foregoing children is stated under their respective names in the next Chapter. The records concerning them are sparse and not as clear as may be wished. Unusual difficulty has been experienced in tracing their descendants, in part because they early scattered to other states, but chiefly because of varying surnames.

THE FAMILY OF NICHOLAS DORN.

The largest number of descendants of Cornelius, given in the next Chapter, are of the family of the Nicholas of Middletown, above named. As Nicholas was called and wrote his name, "Nicholas Dorn," I had for a long time supposed that all his descendants continued this name. But this has been proved to be an error. In fact, while all the children of Cornelius, so far as appears, wrote their names "Dorn," or "Dorne," various of the grandchildren went back nearly to the original and wrote the name "Van Dorn." I have found in the West a large number of Van Dorns, so spelling their name, whom I have been unable to trace back to the line of Cornelius, although reasonably sure they are of his connection. For example, there are many descendants of one Hezekiah Van Dorn, of Middletown, N. J., who served in the Revolutionary War, and who clearly was a grandson of Cornelius, although there is an uncertainty as to which of Cornelius' sons was his father. Perhaps it was Joseph (2520), of Middletown. There are also numerous descendants of Cornelius Van Dorn of Prospect Plains (near Jamesburg, N. J.), whose father was either Diedlof or Cornelius, son of the first Cornelius. Then there are "Van Doren" families, evidently belonging to the Middletown branch.

As to Nicholas of Middletown, it was only after much correspondence with the relatives of Mr. James H. Van Dorn, of the Van Dorn Iron Works, Cleveland, O., and especially, at his suggestion, with another of them, Mrs. Mary S. Burnett, of San Francisco (daughter of Harriet Van Dorn Wilcox, 2462) that I discovered Nicholas to be their ancestor. This discovery opened the way for the identification of William Van Dorn (2642), of Lexington, O. (a son of Nicholas), who had gone to Ohio from Saratoga, N. Y., and who had a large number of descendants unable to trace back their antecedents beyond William. Mrs. Burnett was able to send me a statement by her grandfather, Isaac Van Dorn (2483), which, in its peculiar form as well as in the facts it contained proved to be of great interest. Mrs. Burnett accompanied the statement with the following memoranda:

"This old record crossed the plains in 1847 to Oregon; in 1849 to California; was rescued from Snake River by an Indian; passed through a battle with the Indians, the flood at Sacramento, fire, pestilence and earthquake; and now a copy of part of it returns to the Eastern land from which it came."

The record sent is rather novel in giving dates of birth after both the English and Indian fashion, and is herewith presented in full:

"Nicholas-William-John- and Cornelius Van Dorn-Brothers.

"Isaac Van Dorn was born on Sunday, the 30 of October, half-past two in the morning, in the year of our Lord, one thousand and seven hundred and ninety-one—1791—being the son of Nicholas and Sarah Van Dorn, born in Middletown, County of Monmouth, state of New Jersey.

"Peter Van Dorn, the son of Isaac and Mary Van Dorn, was born on March the 28th at ten o'clock in the morning, on Saturday, in the year of our Lord 1812, town and county of Onondaga, state of New York.

"Harriet Van Dorn, the daughter of Isaac and Mary Van Dorn, was born on Tuesday, at 3 o'clock in the morning, the 22 of February in the year of our Lord 1814, Onondaga.

"Sally Van Dorn, the daughter of Isaac and Mary Van Dorn, was born on Sunday, the 14 April, on the 18 day of the moon, in the year of our Lord 1816, Onondaga.

"Dorcas Van Dorn, the daughter of Isaac and Mary Van Dorn, was born on Tuesday, the 13 of November, in the year of our Lord 1818, County of Genesee, state of New York.

"George Van Dorn, the son of Isaac and Mary Van Dorn, was born the 13 day of June, half-past seven in the afternoon on the 4 day of the new moon, Wednesday, in the year of our Lord 1820, county of Monrow, state of New York.

"Mary Van Dorn, the daughter of Isaac and Mary Van Dorn, was born on the 13 of July on Sunday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the year of our Lord 1823, Monrow county.

"John Van Dorn, the son of Isaac and Mary Van Dorn, was born on Friday evening at ½ past eleven o'clock on the 11 day of February, 1826, on the 11 day of the moon, Monrow county."

If Isaac had only given his mother's maiden name, told more of his uncles, and mentioned the names of his aunts, it would have cleared up some knotty problems about his line, but we are thankful for this much.

In connection with this record Mrs.Burnett sent a copy of a letter written by the same Isaac (who was her grandfather), dated August 26, 1860, which gives the tradition that the ancestral family in Holland were descendants of a family of Van Damon, who fitted out a fleet of discovery for the South Pacific ocean. This I do not quote because it is erroneous. The van Doorn stock was in Holland centuries before Van Damon lived. He also stated that his father, Nicholas, was "cousin to Martin Van Buren," and that "Van Buren's name was formerly Van Dorn." It is possible there was such a relationship, but certainly not directly on the Van Dorn side, as an investigation shows that the Van Buren family were never Van Dorns.

Whatever other facts have been gleaned concerning the descendants of Cornelius of Middletown, and of his son Nicholas, must be gathered from the individual names in the next Chapter.

Without doubt, Cornelius has many unnamed descendants now living who bear the plain name "Dorn," concerning whom it has been found impossible to pursue effective inquiries. That name is to be found everywhere from Maine to California, but is usually of Irish or German origin. Persons bearing the name "Dorn," of other than Holland origin, are so numerous, in fact, and correspondence with scores of them has yielded such little fruit, that the writer long ago discontinued his efforts to trace them.

He bequeathed all his estate to his wife, Catherine, and names no children. The will of Hugh Newell, dated Jan. 6, 1779, was probated Jan. 27, 1779, and I judge him to have been a widower before marrying Catherine. 2371a. Cleveland Van Dorn, of Fenton, Mich., s. of Peter (2595), b., at York, O., July 17, 1835; living; m., Sept. 9, 1856, Mary Waller, (dau. of Seth S. Waller and Hannah Curtis), who was b. Sept. 9, 1837. Mr. Van Dorn has had an interesting history. When a boy he attended the ordinary district schools and a private school, and began teaching at seventeen, in northern Ohio. After his marriage, his wife being a teacher, the two taught together most of the time until the Civil War. Then he enlisted (1862) in the service, being at once made First Lieutenant of Co. A, 124th Ohio Volunteers. The Captain of that company being seldom with it, Lieutenant Van Dorn was virtually in command from the beginning. During their stay in the camp of instruction at Cleveland, the Company performed patrol duty in the city, and was first in position during the attempted riot at the time of the draft; and to its promptness and careful action the mayor and police attributed the defeat of the rioters and the peaceful continuance of the draft. On Jan. 1, 1863, the Company went to the front, and was first engaged in action with Col. Colburn at Springhill, Kentucky, where all the other Federal forces engaged were captured except this one regiment and a section of a battery. Attached to the famous Hazen Brigade, the Regiment was in the Chickamauga campaign and battle; the battles at Chattanooga; the winter campaign of Knoxville; the Atlanta campaign; and, returning with General Thomas to Nashville, participated in the battle there. Lieutenant Van Dorn was promoted to the captaincy of Co. D in the Atlanta campaign, but retained command of Co. A, as well as Co. K, until the close of the War, when his Regiment was mustered out at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND VAN DORN (2371a).

Soldier and Educator,

Of Fenton, Michigan. Born 1835; living.

After the War, Capt. Van Dorn located in Hudson, Mich., where he became Superintendent of Schools. He then became Superintendent of Schools at Corruna City, Mich.; for many years was principal at Fenton Seminary; and then again went into the public school work. In all he taught for thirty-seven years. He next entered upon work for the Baptist denomination as General Secretary, or Field Worker, in Eastern Michigan. There were over 200 churches in the field, and his labors extended to more than 100 of them. He was in this work thirteen years.

He then became superintendent of the Ministers' Home, at Fenton, Mich., an institution sustained by churches in five states. After two years in this service he returned to evangelistic work.

In a recent communication from Mr. Van Dorn, he says: "After spending fifty-six years in absolutely active public life, with few vacations, I am almost perfectly well, eat square meals, sleep soundly, and am fresh in the morning ready for work. At 73 years of age I cannot meet all the requests of the public for my labors. I have delivered more Decoration Day addresses than Decoration Days since the War. The 'old boys' and I are friends. For a somewhat stubborn will, and a strong physical system I am indebted to the Holland 'vans,' and, for what real goodness there may be in me, possibly my English ancestors should have a little credit, for my mother was the queen of mothers. And, if there is any real manhood in me, I owe it to that woman partner of mine, who has been such for fifty-two years."

Mr. Van Dorn was named for General Moses Cleveland, on his mother's side.

2374. CORNELIUS DOORN, (or VAN DOORN), of Middletown, N. J., s. of Diedlof (2389), b., probably on Long Island, (about) 1683; d. 1755; m. Anneke Golder (Golding), who was b. 1682, and d. Sept. 19, 1767. All the particulars known of this Cornelius (the New Jersey head of the line in this Part of this volume) appear in Chapter VII, ante (p. 579). He signed his name "Cornelius Dooren" to his will.

2375. CORNELIUS DORN, blacksmith, of Freehold, N. J., s. of Cornelius (2374), bap. (probably), at Marlborough, N. J., Mar. 4, 1722; d. (after) 1773. He is supposed to be the "son" stated as baptised on the Marlborough records at the above named date. No records indicate that he was married. However, it is possible he was married, and was the father of Cornelius (2377), of near Jamesburg, N. J., although I am strongly convinced that that Cornelius was of different parentage. (See under Cornelius, 2377). In 1746, as "Cornelius Dorn, Junior," he became administrator of the estate of his unmarried sister, Alice (2337), and filed an inventory of the same Mar. 25, 1747 (as per Trenton records). On Nov. 27, 1751, as "Cornelius Dorn, Junior," he signed the marriage license bond of his sister, "Nelly," (Eleanor, 2405), the signature then being as follows:

On June 16, 1759, he purchased of Thomas Bullman, schoolmaster, for £30, 2¼ acres of land in Middletown, adjoining Gersham Walling. (Trenton Deeds, G-3, p. 123). On Sept. 6, 1762, he purchased of the same Bullman for £120, 18 acres adjoining John Wall and Gersham Walling, "on the path from Middletown to Amboy." (Trenton Deeds, G-3, p. 124). On May 13, 1769, "Cornelius Dorne Gave in his Ear Mark for his Cattle as followeth, viz. a Hole in the Left Ear, a Mark that was Sarah Lippits." (Middletown Town Records). On Aug. 26, 1773 he gave a mortgage to Obadiah Holmes, Jr., and others, on the 2¼ acres of land in Middletown and on blacksmith's tools, farm utensils and household goods. From this mortgage, as well as otherwise, we learn that he was "of Freehold, blacksmith." (Monmouth Mortgages, Book A, p. 225). As no wife joined in this mortgage it is probable he was not then married.

As stated above, it might be that this Cornelius did marry, and that among his ch. were some unidentified ones in this Part of this work.

2376. Cornelius Doorn, of Middletown, N. J., s. of Joseph (2520), bap., at Marlborough, N. J., Apr. 17, 1743. No further trace.

2376a. Cornelius Dorn, s. of Rulof (2605), bap., at Flatbush, L. I., June 10, 1753. No further trace.

2377. Cornelius Van Dorn, farmer, of near Jamesburg, N. J., s. of (supposed) Diedlof (2391), b. June 15, 1758; d. 1825; m. Sophia Snedeker, who was b. Mar. 23, 1761, and who survived him. As Cornelius named his oldest son Michael, I conjecture him to have been the son of Diedlof (2391), who was a sea-captain, residing near Middletown, N. J. Diedlof named a son Michael, after his father-in-law, Michael Vander Hoeve, who would have been the grandfather of Cornelius if the relationship between Cornelius and Diedlof as stated be correct. He might have been the son of Cornelius (2375), brother of Diedlof, but my conjecture is otherwise. In any event, without doubt he was a grandson of Cornelius (2374). Immediate descendants of Cornelius wrote their name "Van Dorn," or similarly, but some later descendants changed it to "Van Doren." The wife of Cornelius, Sophia, was always called "Syche," and such was the baptismal name of her last daughter. It was simply the Dutch spelling for Sophia. It is probable that Cornelius served in the Revolutionary War as a private in Capt. Cathcart's 1st Regiment, Monmouth Co. Militia.

Cornelius purchased, June 23, 1790, of William Burnet, for £70, about 71 acres of land, a "portion of Robert Burnet's patent in Cranbury," (Middlesex Co. Deeds, Book 5, p. 193), and on June 22, 1800, for £200, 95¾ acres of the executors of Henry Silcocks(Ibid, p. 194). This gave him 166 acres of land, which he held until Jan. 21, 1822, when he sold (perhaps exchanged) about 61 acres of it to John H. Vanderhoef of South Amboy. (Ibid, Book 15, p. 369). In the meantime, on Sept. 3, 1816, he purchased of his son, Henry, 35 acres in South Amboy twsp., where, seven years after his death, his executor, Aaron Gulick, (on Apr. 9, 1832) sold 116 acres of Cornelius' land to George W. Reynolds. It is probable that Cornelius lived during his later years in South Amboy twsp., as he was there when he made his will.

The will of Cornelius, dated May 6, 1825, probated June 17, 1825, (Middlesex Co. Wills, Book C, p. 67), gave (1): To his wife, Sophia, all his real and personal estate during her widowhood. (2) To his daughter, Elizabeth Camp, $20 per year for the education of her children until the youngest arrives at five years of age, "provided she does not live with her husband Eli Camp;" after that payment is to cease. (3) After the death or marriage of his wife, the executors to sell the real and personal estate, and divide the proceeds among the children share and share alike. These children are enumerated as Michael, Isaac, Maria Stults, Grace Voorhis, Elsie Vanderhoef and Sarah Ann Nevius (but there were others not enumerated). (4) His wife, son Michael, and Aaron Gulick, to be executors. He signed his name to the will: "Cornelius Vandrn."

2378. Cornelius Dorne, farmer, of Middletown, N. J., s. of Nicholas (2586), b. (probably about), 1770; d. (about) 1825; m. Ann Delevan (?). He probably m. after 1804, as on July 13 of that year he and his brother John (2507) conveyed (without wives joining in the deed) three acres of land at Middletown to their brother, Nicholas (2587), "for love and affection." (Monmouth Deeds, Book O, p. 710). On Jan. 22, 1822, the sheriff of Monmouth county conveyed 70 acres of land to one John Crawford on a judgment obtained in 1821. In this deed the judgment debtors are named as "Cornelius and Ann Delevan," which I judge to be intended for Cornelus Dorne and Ann Delevan, his wife. On Jan. 27, 1824, Cornelius conveyed about 57 acres of land to John A. Huff. In this deed his wife is called "Ann," but is signed "Nancy," although the actually signature is by her mark. In this deed Cornelius is stated to be of Middletown. On Feb. 24, 1825, letters of administration were granted to John A. Huff upon the estate of "Cornelius Dorne, intestate." (Monmouth Co. Records). That Cornelius had ch. I have no doubt, and perhaps William (2646), was one of them.

2379. Cornelius Van Dorn, farmer, of Rodney, Iowa, s. of William (2642), b., near Amboy, N. J., June 2, 1793; d. Oct. 13, 1876; m., June 12, 1822, Mary Wilkinson, of Lexington, Ky., who was b. Nov. 21, 1803, and d. Sept. 23, 1879. Cornelius removed with his parents, about 1804, from near Amboy, N. J., to Saratoga, N. Y., and thence, in 1814, to Ohio, where he purchased 80 acres of land near Bellville, Richland co. When on this farm he married and here raised his family of thirteen children. In 1854 he sold out and moved to West Union, Iowa, and in 1855 went to Monona co., Iowa, where he purchased 600 acres of land, on which he resided until his death. This farm was located near Smithland, a portion being that on which the town of Rodney is situated, while another portion is that now owned by his son, Samuel L.

The early settlers in the vicinity of Smithland, at the time Cornelius settled there, saw many hard and stirring times, especially because of the Indians. Once, after the news of a massacre of settlers at Spirit Lake, most of the people along the Sioux River left their farms and moved to Ashton, the county seat, while others went to Smithland, got together in a log house and made a fort out of it.

Mr. Van Dorn was a class leader of note in the Methodist church at Bellville, O., and, after settling in Iowa, his home was known far and near under the title of "The Methodist Preacher's Hotel." This was based on the fact that it was a regular rendezvous for Methodist preachers. Here, also, he was a class leader until his death, and for some years he was superintendent of a Sunday-school. He was noted for his remarkable memory, especially of the Scriptures, having the Bible "almost learned by heart." He was often called upon to give lectures at Sunday-schools, and frequently, in the absence of a minister, officiated at funerals.

Wilson was one of the most active patriots of the Revolution in Somerset county, being the son of Hendrick Wilson, who came from Long Island to Somerset co. in 1720 and purchased a tract of land on the Amwell Road between the Millstone river and Royce's Brook. His son, Hendrick K., purchased of his father about 89 acres of this land, but, subsequently (1765), purchased a farm near Neshanic, N. J., to which he removed, and where he spent the remainder of his life. He is said to have inherited 35 slaves from his father and purchased more, and he was considered a rich man, as well as an able one in business matters. He was one of the appraisers for the government of the confiscated estates of the Tories and was otherwise prominent in Somerset county during the War. An interesting account of him appeared in the "Newark Evening News" of June 6, 1908.

The date of death of Eleanor I have not ascertained, but it was before the Revolution. After her death Hendrick again m. Rebecca Cashow, by whom he had several ch. Mrs. Levi Carkhuff of Reaville, N. J., a descendant by Hendrick's second wife, has many interesting antiques of the Wilson family, including a silver snuff-box bearing the initials "N. W." (of Hendrick K. Wilson's first wife, Nelly Dorn); also portions of a dinner service of pewter and a solid silver tea service which Hendrick presented to this, his first bride, when he married her.

It is generally stated that Hendrick had no children by his wife "Nelly Dorn," but the last will of her father, Cornelius (2374) shows that she had a son, James Wilson, at the time of his death in 1765, (See page 583).

Leslie. Later he went upon the farm of his brother-in-law, Ephraim Wilcox, immediately after the latter's death in 1838. He subsequently farmed for his sister Mary. In 1840 he started for Iowa to pre-empt a home for his sister Mary and himself, chose a place in Buchanan co., returned to Illinois for his sister, and found that she had died in his absence. He then remained in Illinois until 1844, when he took possession of his claim in Iowa and became a farmer there. In 1847 he went to Oregon with ox-teams and emigrant wagons, pre-empted land in that territory, but after two years sold the same to the Hudson Bay Co., and removed to Sacramento City, Cal., where he built the first frame building, calling it the "Van Dorn Family Hotel." He subsequently returned to Onondaga co., N. Y., but in 1864 went to Fairview, Ill., where he was a merchant for three years, later removing to Chariton, where he died. Miss Van Dorn was the first school teacher in Woodbury Co., Iowa, and has been termed "the grandmother of the magnificent school system for which that county is famed." She "opened the school in the fall of 1855 at Smithland in a log schoolhouse, with seats of slabs hewed on one side. For desks, holes were bored in the side of the room in which wooden pins were placed, on which slabs were raised. The scholars faced the wall. The floor and door were of slabs, the door having wooden hinges and a wooden latch. This was probably a model of the early schoolhouse in the far West. Miss Van Dorn was then living with her father, and had moved from Richland co., Ohio, in 1854. (See particulars under her father). She taught for three months at $12 per month. Immediately after her marriage in 1855, she and her husband took a trip overland to Savannah, where they purchased a farm, and resided there until 1862, when they sold out and went to Peoria, Ill., subsequently going to Rich Hill, Mo., to Salem, Ore., and to Picard, Cal., where her husband was engaged in mining for a short time. They then removed to Ashland, Ore., where she now resides."

2471. Hezekiah Van Dorn, of Middletown, N. J., b. (probably about), 1758. His parentage is unknown, but I have no doubt he was one of the numerous grandchildren of Cornelius (2374), who cannot be located with definiteness. The name of his wife is also unknown. He lived at Middletown after the close of the Revolutionary War, in which he served as a soldier, and probably did not die until after the beginning of the following century. All that is really known of him is his interesting War record. It appears that he was entered originally of record as a soldier under the name of "Eseck," which was doubtless a nickname for "Hezekiah," and not a misspelling for Isaac, as some have supposed. His subsequent record was under the name of Hezekiah, which name has been continued in his family to this day.

So far as appears, there were no other families at Middletown of the Van Dorn name prior to the Revolution except descendants of Cornelius (2374), and there is, therefore, no reason to doubt that Hezekiah belongs to this line. The data concerning his descendants has been furnished chiefly by Miss Inez L. Van Dorn (2479), now Mrs. Charles R. Dickerson, of 821½ W. Washington St., Springfield, Ill., but, necessarily, the facts were limited chiefly to her own direct line.

Hezekiah's war record was as follows, as appears from the files of the Adjutant-General's office at Trenton:

"Eseck Van Dorn (also of record as Hezekiah) served as a Private, Captain John Burrowes' Company, Colonel David Forman's Regiment, Infantry, Continental Army, enlisted at Middletown, Monmouth County, New Jersey, February 13, 1777, for the war; at battles of Short Hills, New Jersey, June 26, 1777; Brandywine, Delaware, September 11, 1777; Germantown, Pennsylvania, October 4, 1777; and Monmouth, New Jersey, June 28, 1778; transferred with Company to Colonel Oliver Spencer's Regiment, Infantry, Continental Army, June 11, 1779; served with the New Jersey Brigade, Brigadier-General William Maxwell, in Major John Sullivan's Division, Continental Army, against the Six Nations (Indians), in Western Pennsylvania and New York May 11 to November 5, 1779; at battles of Newtown and Chemung, New York, August 29, 1779; Connecticut Farms, New Jersey, June 7, 1780; and Springfield, New Jersey, June 23, 1780; deserted July 1, 1780; rejoined as Hezekiah Van Dorn, as private Captain Jonathan Holmes' Company, Second Regiment, Infantry, New Jersey Continental Line, Colonel Israel Shreve, May 22, 1782; transferred with Company, to the New Jersey Battalion, Lieutenant Colonel Commandant John N. Cumming, March 1, 1783; furloughed at New Windsor, New York, June 6, 1783, until the ratification of the definite treaty of peace; honorably discharged November 3, 1783, by proclamation of Congress, close of the Revolutionary War."

It is through letters from him, written to his granddaughter, Mrs. Burnett, that I have been enabled to secure the interesting facts given on page 587. 2495. James Van Dorn, carpenter, of 1020 Moyaing Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., s. of James (2494), b. Mar. 12, 1861; d. in recent years.

2496. James H. Van Dorn, of 2697 Woodhill Road, Cleveland, O., s. of Peter (2595), b., at York, O., Dec. 4, 1841; living; m., Sept. 10, 1865, Sarah Ann Getridge, who was b. Sept. 16, 1843. He is now president of the Van Dorn Iron Works, his son, Thomas B., being first vice-president and manager, and his second, James P., being third vice-president, and his brother, Dwight B. (2395), being superintendent.

When eighteen years of age he was apprenticed to John A. Topliff of Elyria, O., learning the blacksmith's trade. After serving the apprenticeship, he worked for Aultman & Miller, of Akron, O., for ten years, and then started into the iron fence business. In 1898 he began the manufacture of structural iron, and one of his early contracts was the erection of a 16-story iron building known as the Williamson Bldg., in Cleveland, which was built in 160 working days.

The Van Dorn Iron Works Company is now a large incorporated concern, employing about 600 men, and composed of four separate departments, each with its own manager, viz.: the Structural Iron Department; the Steel Jail Department; the Ornamental and Light Iron Department, and the Art Metal and File Department. The Structural Iron Department has been kept busy in erecting some of the large steel buildings in various cities, some of these containing 2,000 tons of steel. The Steel Jail Department has built and equipped various prisons and penitentiaries throughout the land; in fact, The Van Dorn Iron Works Company is the largest manufacturer of steel jails and prison work in the United States. Among the largest and most successful constructions by this department is that of the United States Jail at Washington, the Connecticut State Prison, the new Tombs Prison in New York City, the Nebraska State Prison, the West Virginia State Prison, and the Maryland State Penitentiary, the latter containing 846 cells. The Larkin Building at Buffalo was constructed and furnished throughout by the Van Dorn Iron Works Co., the contract for the steel furniture alone amounting to $100,000. Not a stick of wood enters into the construction or furniture of this building, even the doors, desks (of which there are 431), tables and chairs being of steel, and from original models. Metal furniture has also been supplied to the Kings County Hall of Records, Brooklyn, to the amount of $186,000; to the Cook County Court House, Chicago, to the amount of $140,000; and to the State Capital Building at St. Paul, to the amount of $38,000.

From the Ornamental and Light Iron Department there have gone forth wrought-iron fencing, cemetery fencing and gates, stairs, balconies, fire-escapes, lawn seats, etc., apparently in endless variety. In the Art Metal and File Department are made office desks, filing cases, and all sorts of furnishings. These facts I glean from The Van Dorn Iron Works Company's catalogue and not from Mr. Van. Dorn himself, who has been too modest to furnish this work with a full sketch either of his life or of his successful business career.

Mr. Van Dorn is also president of the Van Dorn & Dutton Co., manufacturers of cut gears for shops, trolley cars and automobiles, which employs about 150 men; also president of the Van Dorn & Elliot Co., employing about 50 men. He has also been prominently associated with the banking interests of Cleveland. To his wife, Mrs. Van Dorn, Mr. Van Dorn gives the credit of "always being his helpmate in every undertaking throughout their married life."

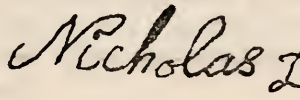
2586. Nicholas Dorn, of Middletown, N. J., s. of Cornelius (2374), b. there (about) 1724; d. 1796; m. Sarah Smith (license dated August 27, 1761). This is the Nicholas of whom special mention is made on page 586, ante. He seems to have been both farmer and weaver, although farming but a few acres of ground. He is probably the same "Nicholas" who served as a private in the Monmouth county militia in the Revolutionary War, but the records at Trenton do not contain more specific information.

Two of the children of Nicholas (Nicholas and John), were baptised at Marlborough, N. J., but it is known that he had a large family, including not only the two mentioned, but William of Lexington, Ohio, and Cornelius of Middletown, N. J. The signature of Nicholas to his marriage bond was as follows:



This bond is on file at Trenton.

Nicholas' eldest son, Nicholas, continued his father's name as "Dorn," but his children changed the name to Van Dorn, which practice seems to have been earlier inaugurated by the first Nicholas' son, William, of Lexington, O. There is no evidence that the sons, John and Cornelius, who remained in New Jersey, or their descendants made the same change.

On Jan. 17, 1768, "Nicholas Dorne," was entered on the Middletown Town Records as giving in his ear-marks for cattle, which were the same as those of his father, then deceased.

The will of Nicholas Dorn was so signed by him, although in the body of the will it was written "Dorne." It was proved Feb. 6, 1796, and dated Sept. 12, 1795. (Trenton Wills, Book 35, p. 370). The complete will is as follows:

"In the name of God, Amen. I, Nicholas Dorne, of Middletown, in the County of Monmouth and Eastern Division of the State of New Jersey, being sick and weak in body, but of sound disposing mind and memory, but considering the uncertainty of this life, do therefore make this my last will and testament, in manner following: And, first, recommending my soul into the hands of God who gave it, into whose Kingdom (notwithstanding my own unworthiness), I hope to be received through the merits and intercessions of my Blessed Saviour and Redeemer, Jesus Christ: My body I will to be buried at the discretion of my executors hereinafter named, and as touching such temporal state wherewith it has pleased God to bless me in this life, I give, devise and dispose of the same in the following manner and form:

"First, I will that all my just debts be well and truly paid in some convenient time after my decease.

"Secondly, I give and bequeath unto my eldest son Nicholas, his heirs and assigns forever, the house where he now lives, with two acres of land about the house. I also give him my loom, which he has now in possession; which said house and lot, with the loom, I hereby declare shall be in full bar of all claim as heir, or any other claim or demand which he can have, claim or demand of, in or to any part of my estate either real or personal.

"Item, I give and bequeath to Sarah Dorne, daughter of my son William, the sum of five pounds.

"Item, I give and bequeath unto William Dorne, the son of my son William, the like sum of five pounds, to be paid to them, the said Sarah and William Dorne, within one year after my decease by my executors hereinafter named.

"Item, I give and bequeath to my three sons, William Dorne, John Dorne and Cornelius Dorne, their heirs and assigns forever, all my estate, both real and personal to be divided between them, share and share alike, excepting the house, two acres of land and loom above granted to my son Nicholas Dorne, and also excepting my gun, chest, loom and tackling belonging to my looms, which I give and bequeath to my youngest son Cornelius; my chest, loom and tackling belonging to my looms I give and bequeath to my grandson Nicholas, son of my son William.

"And lastly, I do hereby nominate, constitute and appoint my loving sons William Dorne and John Dorne and my trusty and well-beloved friend, Daniel Hendrickson (son of John) living in Middletown, to be executors of this my last will and testament, hereby revoking all former wills by me made, and declaring this to be my last will and testament.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this twelfth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five—1795—.

"NICHOLAS DORN."

The witnesses to the will were: John McQueen, Joseph Herbert, Peter Vandeventer.

The inventory of the estate of Nicholas, dated Aug. 14, 1796, amounted to £160.15.6, and included 2 cows, 2 heifers, 2 steers, one yoke of oxen, 1 mare, 8 sheep, one "cyder-mill and press," one sleigh, 3 hogs and "grain in ground," the latter valued at £12, which shows that Nicholas was a farmer only to a very small extent.

Children:

Nicholas (2587), bap. 1762; d. (after) 1805.
William (2642), b. (probably) 1764; d. 1847.
John (2507), b. 1765; d. 1835.
Cornelius (2378), b. (about) 1770; d. 1825.
(There were probably daughters).

2587. Nicholas Dorn, of Middletown, N. J., s. of Nicholas (2586), bap., at Marlborough, N. J., Apr. 4, 1762; m. Sarah ——. In 1804 he received from his brothers, Cornelius (2378) and John (2507), "for love and affection," a deed for 3 acres of land in Middletown. The gift may have been connected with the settlement of his father's estate. On Apr. 8, 1805, Nicholas and wife conveyed the same three acres to Daniel and Cornelius Walling. On Apr. 25, 1805 he sold to Peter Snyder the two-acre lot given to him by his father's last will, on which he had resided for some years. (Middlesex Deeds, Book O, p. 1030; Book P, p. 92).

As those children of Nicholas of whom we have any trace seem to have lived and married in the state of New York, I conjecture that Nicholas went there also after the year 1805, and did not return. The last name of the wife of Nicholas is unknown, but the deeds above recorded show that her first name was Sarah. The fact that his father also married a Sarah (Smith) is not to be overlooked by those examining the records of this family. Both father and son wrote their name "Dorn."

Nicholas seems to have had a large family, but definite information can be given only of the line of his son, Isaac, concerning whom see pages 587 and 622, ante. Mrs. P. V. Van Arsdale, of Clinton, Iowa, a grandaughter of Isaac, writes: "I do not remember of hearing of a brother of Isaac named William, but do remember of a brother John, who was a minister. When I was a child I visited Lewis Van Dorn, an uncle of my father, near Manlius, N. Y., but have not heard from him since 1857." It is quite certain that Nicholas had four sons, order unknown, named Isaac, John, Lewis and Peter. It is not impossible that William (2646), Sarah (2614), Roelof (2602), Mary (2558), Samuel (2608), and Jacob (2490), were all children of Nicholas, but this is conjecture.

Keziah Gardner, of Connecticut, who was b. Dec. 8, 1812, and d. July 12, 1864. Between the years 1830 and 1850 Mr. Van Dorn had the reputation of being "the greatest barn builder" in northern Ohio. When he was fifteen years of age he apprenticed himself to a barn builder near Syracuse, N. Y., and when twenty years of age began to erect barns in northern Ohio. It is said of him that "he could spot more timber, lay out and raise a barn quicker than any man in that part of the country." He finally settled on a farm in Lorain co., and stood well in the community. "He was arbitrary in the management of the premises, and allowed no swearing, tobacco chewing, smoking or drinking. His strongest trait was the raising of boys. He knew what to do with a boy from the very start up, and the boy generally knew what to do every hour. He was anxious to raise a President of the United States."

2642. William Van Dorn, farmer, of Lexington, O., s. of Nicholas (2586). b., at Middletown, N. J., Jan. 21, 1764 (?); d., at Lexington, O., Apr. 13, 1847; m. (about) 1782, Mary Chasey, who was b. June 17, 1756, and d. May 19, 1832. He is said to have located first, near Perth Amboy, N. J.; and, about 1804, went with his family to Saratoga, N. Y., from which place he removed, in 1814, to near Lexington, O. Mary Chasey is said to have been the daughter of a John Chasey. This William Van Dorn is the first person of his line in America, so far as we know, to re-instate the Holland "van" in his name, so that he and his children became Van Dorns. His example was followed by the children of his brother, Nicholas (2587).

On Aug. 26, 1860, in a letter from William's nephew, Isaac (2483), to a granddaughter, he writes: "William died in Mansfield, O., twelve years ago. I saw him five years before he died. He was smart and was 85 years old then; 90 years old when he died." The tombstone of William, at Lexington, which the writer has had examined twice, reads as follows: "Wm. Vandorn Sen. Died April 13, 1847, in the 87 year of his age." Strangely enough neither the statement of his nephew, Isaac, nor the inscription on the tombstone, can be reconciled with the known facts. The marriage of his parents could not have occurred before Aug. 27, 1761, as their marriage license was of that date (the writer has examined the original paper at Trenton), and we know from the father's will that there was an older son, Nicholas, born before William. Assuming that the son, Nicholas, may have been born in 1762, William could have been born Jan. 21, 1764, or, perhaps, 1763. This would make him at his death 84, instead of 86 years of age. In an old family Bible of Elisha, son of William, it is stated that William's birth is given as Jan. 2, 1761, which would agree with the tombstone. Nevertheless, no original entries have been found anywhere, and it is more than certain that those who inscribed William's tombstone, and probably he, himself, were mistaken as to the year of his birth. This often happened among those born in pre-Revolutionary days, who went far from home, and, in old age, trusted to memory for the year of their birth.

The tombstone to Mary Van Dorn, who died fifteen years earlier than her husband, is also at Lexington, and is thus worded: "In memory of Mary Vandorn, wife of Wm. Vandorn, departed this life May 19, 1832, in her 76 year. 'She was virtuous through life and resigned in death.'"

William does not seem to have left a will, there being none of record at Mansfield, O., the county seat for Richland co., in which Lexington is situated.

Mary (2559), b. 1801.

2643. William Van Dorn, of Tompkins co., N. Y., b. (probably about) 1780. It is known of him that he was born in New Jersey (probably near Amboy, Monmouth co.), removed to Canandaigua, N. Y., m. a "Dolly" Dickerson, and d. there. It is said he d. quite early in life and his widow m. a De Vore. It is probable that he was a first cousin to William Van Doran (2646). He was certainly related to this William, because his son, John (2510), married a daughter of William (2646), and the family state they were cousins. I have no question that William, like William (2646) was a grandchild or great-grandchild of Cornelius (2374), of Middletown, N. J., but at present his parentage is uncertain. His descendants became "Van Doran" in name, and perhaps William so spelled it.

Children (order not certain):

Jacob (2492), b. 1803; d. 1879.

He removed (about) 1849 from Whetstone to Wood co., O., and afterward to Indiana, perhaps near Fort Wayne. No further particulars except that he is said to have had fifteen children (another authority says eight), the name of only one of whom has been obtained, viz.:

Child:

Myron (2581): said to be living.

2645. William Van Dorn, of Covington, Ind., s. of Hezekiah (2471), b., at Middletown, N. J., 1789. No further facts.

2646. William Van Doran, of Canandaigua, N. Y., and Peoria, Ill., b. (about) 1790 "near Elizabethtown, N. J.;" d. (about) 1865, at Peoria, Ill.; m. Sallie Dickinson (dau. of John Dickinson, of Ludlowville, Tompkins co., New York). William is said to have been an own cousin to William (2643), and perhaps their wives were sisters.

An interesting letter from a descendant, Mrs. E. A. Schultz, of Clinton, Iowa, states that the father of William, of whose name she is uncertain, was in the Revolutionary War; that he lived in a "stone farmhouse near Elizabethtown, N. J.," in which his son, William, afterward resided, and where William's children, or some of them, were born; that William subsequently sold the farm-house and farm, and moved to Canandaigua, Tompkins co., N. Y. The son, William, when twenty years of age, played the fife in a drum corps in the War of 1812. I have no other direct clew to the parentage of William, but have no doubt he belongs to this line of Cornelius (2374), of Middletown, Monmouth co. There are some reasons for suspecting that he was a son of Nicholas (2587), whose children resided in New York state, and various of whom are unaccounted for. In such case he was a brother to Isaac (2483). Or he may have been a son of Cornelius (2378), a brother of Nicholas, of whose family nothing is known; or of Joseph (2521), which might have given the name, Joseph, to one of his sons. William's granddaughter, Mrs. Mary A. Bart, of Lyons, Ia. (2569), who is also through her father the granddaughter of William (2643), states her impression that the above named William, her mother's father, was the son of a James or Christian Van Doran, but I am unable to locate them on any record.

As William was one of a large family which settled in the state of New York early in the last century, all of whom apparently spell their names Van Doran, I have felt an unusual interest in tracing out this particular line back to Cornelius (2374), but have not made of it a success. William had various brothers and sisters, among them Sarah (2614), Roelof (2602), Mary (2558), Samuel (2608), and Jacob (2490). There were probably others. The general statement that William and his father lived "near Elizabethtown, N. J.," indicates that he was of the general vicinity of Amboy, Elizabethtown being then the largest place in that part of New Jersey. Various of the descendants of Cornelius (2374), located between Middletown and Elizabethtown, as did other branches of the same line.

Part IV.

LINE OF ANTHONY VAN DOORN, OF RHODE ISLAND.

PREFATORY NOTE.

Some time during the first half of the Eighteenth century, a van Doorn, from Holland, located in Essequebo, British Guiana, South America, for the purpose of raising coffee. His first name does not appear, but one of his sons, Abraham, born at Essequebo, June 17, 1760, returned to Holland and became sheriff of Zeeland and a Councilor of State. His son, Hendrick Jacob, became Prime Minister under the King, was raised to the rank of Baron, and was, in his day, one of the most noted of the many public men in the Netherlands. (For some account of him, see page 21, ante).

There was also residing in British Guiana, at an earlier date, a Moses van Doorn, who must have been related to Abraham, and probably was his uncle. He is said to have previously resided at Rotterdam, but this is not certain. He married, at Rio Berbice, British Guiana, Elizabeth Dretlass. He died at Rio Berbice, on his cotton plantation, Sept., 1749, and his wife died there March, 1752. The records speak of them as "honorable persons." Moses must have been born about 1715. Among his children (names not stated) was Anthony, his first son.

Anthony Van Doorn (he and his descendants have used the capital "V"), first son of Moses, was born at Rio Berbice, Feb. 19, 1736. About the year 1755 he went to Rhode Island, and there married, Sept. 8, 1756, Ruth Ingraham (daughter of Joshua Ingraham of Bristol, R. I., and had ten children, all born at Bristol, R. I. In his later years Anthony returned to British Guiana, where he probably had a plantation, and died at Essequebo, Dec. 1, 1786, aged fifty years. (For further particulars, see under Anthony, 2670).

The descendants of the children of Anthony constitute what is generally called "The Rhode Island Line of Van Doorns," now scattered from Rhode Island to California, but on the whole not very numerous. The line is an interesting one, however, and includes many exceedingly worthy persons. It is the only American line which has strictly adhered to the original spelling.

The available data concerning this family are presented on the ensuing pages. For general convenience of reference, the numbering of each member of the family is continued from the preceding line.

I., Sept. 8, 1756, Ruth Ingraham (dau. of Joshua Ingraham) who was b., at Bristol, Apr. 16, 1737, and d. Oct. 15, 1791. Anthony came to Rhode Island, it is said, "to learn the English language," and there met and married Miss Ingraham. The following particulars of the romance of his marriage and of his wife's family are furnished by Mr. George F. Van Doorn, of Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"Sarah, the only daughter of Joseph Wilson, a proud English landowner, married a plebian, Edward Cowell, of Yorkshire, against her father's will. Renounced by her father, the young couple migrated to America and located at Boston. In 1680 Mr. Wilson died without relenting toward his daughter, but when his last will was read, it appeared that he had given lands on the river Aire, about six miles long by three wide, where a large part of the city of Leeds now stands, to his granddaughter, Sarah Cowell (born July 2, 1669), entailing it, however, to the fifth generation.

"Sarah Cowell, the daughter of Joseph and Sarah Wilson, married Timothy Ingraham, of Boston, son of William Ingraham, and they settled in Bristol, R. I. Their daughter, Ruth, married Anthony Van Doorn, who had been sent to Rhode Island from South America to learn the English language. The young heiress, Ruth Ingraham, took him in charge, became his governess, and married him. It may be added that, for services in the Crusades before Jerusalem, John Ingraham, progenitor of Ruth Ingraham, was authorized (in the Middle Ages), to emblazon on his shield three shells, which appear on the Ingraham coat-of-arms."

Various of the heirs of Anthony Van Doorn, some years ago, laid claim to a share of his estate through the supposed interest in it of their ancestor, Ruth Ingraham, and spent both time and money in England and America hunting up records and proofs of descent, but nothing ever came of it.

Baldwin and Caroline Howard), who was b. June 19, 1842, and is living at 9 Harris Place, Brattleboro. At the age of twenty-one Charles A. entered into partnership with his father in the business of manufacturing furniture. After four years his health failing he went south and established a similar business at Eutaw, Ala. He was there when the Civil War broke out. His correspondence with his brother-in-law, John S. Brown, was intercepted because of the events connected with John Brown, the abolitionist, with whom Charles A. was supposed to be in sympathy. For three and one-half years his family did not hear from him and supposed him to be dead. Just before the War broke out a mob surrounded his house and intended lynching him, but did not. He afterwards said that 'he was well armed and made up his mind that if anyone attempted entering the house there would be bloodshed.' He was a small man, but full of pluck. He had accumulated a fortune, but the War took it away, as he was forced into the Southern army, and of his experiences there a relative writes: "He remained at his post till at one time he was footsore and sick and unable to carry his gun. He sat down by a tree to rest. His company marched on and left him. After a time the Union army came along, and picked him up, and he was transferred across the line into Illinois, from whence he reached his home in Brattleboro." After marrying his second wife, he went to Concord, Mass., for two years; to Brattleboro for seven years; and then to Greenfield, Mass., where he engaged in general mercantile business for twenty-three years, owning one of the finest stores of crockery, paper-hanging, silver-ware, etc., in the state. In April, 1906, he retired to West Brattleboro in broken health, and resided there until his death. He is said to have been a man of unusually fine and strong character.

APPENDIX I.

Notes on Miscellaneous Persons of Doorn, Van Doorn, etc., Names in America, not Connected with Foregoing Lines.

DOORN.—Alexander Doorn m. Rachel Egmond in 1779 and located at Schenectady, N. Y. Several families of that name, whom I judge to have been of Holland origin, were in that vicinity between 1780 and 1800. (See Pierson's "First Settlers of Schenectady," pp. 62, etc.)

DORN.—Nicodemus A. J. Dorn, of Watsonville, California, wrote in 1890 as follows: "Am of purely Holland stock. My grandfather was killed at the Battle of Waterloo. My own father, Augustus, was b. about 1803; came to this country about 1816; lived five or six years in New Orleans; then in Harrisburg, Kentucky; m. Ruth Flecher, of Kentucky, in which state I was b., Apr. 5, 1830. He d. in Casey Co., Ky., about 1887. Grandfather resided in Amsterdam, Holland, and the family were prominent in the army. I am the only living descendant of my father or his family in America." Nicodemus had a sister Elizabeth, who m. William Macey, and resided in Iowa, and he had himself ten children, all living in 1890. His wife was a Miss Walters.

D. S. Dorn, Esq., a prominent attorney of San Francisco, Cal., wrote in 1906: "My grandfather was killed at the Battle of Waterloo. Our name has been spelled in several different ways: Dorn, Dorne, Doorn, van Dorn and von Dorne. We really do not know ourselves the correct method of spelling." He seems to be of the same family as Nicodemus A. J. Dorn.

VAN DEREN.—There is a family of this name, origin unknown, but said to be from the Netherlands, represented by Miss Luella Van Deren, of 818 West Edwards St., Springfield, Ill., who has other relatives there, and who gives the original name as Van Dieren. She states that her ancestor, Barnard Van Deren, settled in Loudoun Co., Va., prior to the Revolution, and that he served in the Revolutionary War. He married Margaret Murry. At the close of the War he removed to Paris, Ky., and later to Harrison Co., where they died. They raised a large family. His son, Barnard, married Eliza McKee, and removed to Sangamon Co., Ill., in 1835. His oldest son, Cyrus Wallon, married Margaret Patton, and also died in Sangamon Co., he in 1883 and she in 1901. They were the parents of Miss Luella.

Archibald J. Van Deren, of Littleton, Colo., of the same family, wrote, in 1890, that somewhere about 1750 two brothers came to America from "a small town in one of the German states, one settling in New Jersey and the other somewhere in Virginia." His father came of the Virginia family, and with six brothers moved to Illinois, to Coles and Sangamon counties, where some of them are still. Archibald's father's name was Barnard, whose brothers were John, James, Joseph, Jesse, Godfrey and Stephen.

VAN DOEREN.—William Van Doeren, of 3011 Glasgow Place, St. Louis, Mo., gives his spelling as here printed, but no particulars.

VAN DOOREN.—John Joseph Van Dooren, of 3 Brooks Place, Boston, Mass., wrote in 1896 that he was descended from John Van Dooren of Sartogen Woods, Holland, a weaver. He had a son John, of Antwerp, b. 1766, who m. Jenny Lysen, and had five children: Mary L., Louis, Joseph W., John Joseph and another. The John Joseph named came to Boston. At the same time there was a son of Louis named John, residing in Philadelphia.

John Van Dooren, of 44 Mt. Pleasant St., Boston, also wrote that his grandfather was John Batist Van Dooren of Holland, who d. in 1849, aged 72, and that his son, Louis, of Antwerp, Belgium, b. June, 1818, was John Batist's father. He is undoubtedly connected with the same family as John Joseph Van Dooren.

Miss Jennie Van Dooren, of 579 Butterworth Ave., Grand Rapids, Mich., wrote, in 1908, of her ancestors: "Johannes Van Dooren and Hielkje Boedenia Van Wetzinga formerly resided in Groningen and Rotterdam, Holland, and emigrated to America. Their parents were Gerrit Van Dooren and Janna Sjaneker. The parents of Gerrit resided in Assen, Drenthe."

APPENDIX IV.

An Interesting Revolutionary Incident, Connected with Abraham Van Doren (23).

The home of Abraham Van Doren (23), of Griggstown, N. J., whose wife was Anne Van Dyke, was the scene of a Revolutionary incident, in 1777, so interesting, that it is given here (in part) as presented in a paper read before the Somerset Co. Historical Society by his great-grandson, Rev. William Halsey Van Doren (2268):

"In the centre of this hamlet (Griggstown), and as the source of its prosperity, stood my great-grandfather's mill. With the eye of an experienced engineer and man of affairs, he had located the river-dam upon the last ledge of rock, where the banks of 'Old Red Sandstone' pushed up by the trap formation underneath, had nearly closed the gap between the adjoining hills; so that with a dam of only four hundred yards in length, he was able to control the entire force of the stream, which was then more than double its present volume. At this point, therefore, in consequence, as a nucleus, grew up a busy manufacturing and trading post. So greatly did it prosper that early in the following century it became the most considerable business depot between Trenton and New Brunswick.

"Besides the store, the ruins of which are still standing, was the flouring mill, with four run of stones, a grist, or feed-mill of similar capacity, a large saw-mill, a carding-mill and power-loom, a cider-mill and distillery, a cooperage, a coach and wagon shop, two blacksmith shops, a lath mill and others. A large tract of farming and timber land, between six and seven hundred acres in extent, stretching from the Millstone River between two unfailing streams of water, up to Ten-Mile-Run, was included in the estate. The dwelling-houses, the quarters for the negro slaves, the large barns, out-houses, the great stables, and other buildings necessary for so large an establishment, and the accommodation of so many families dependent upon it, were clustered about the premises. . . .

"As soon as the news of the declaration of war with England came and the British fleet arrived in New York Bay, the farmers of the vicinity began to arm themselves and to drill and to muster for general training. A troop of light horse cavalry was formed, and a Committee was appointed, consisting of Major Hartwick, Jacob Van Dyke and my great-grandfather, to keep in touch with the patriots at Millstone and Princeton, and especially to keep vigilant watch on the movements of the enemy. No one had so much to risk, however, as my great-grandfather. The mills and the storehouses were filled with flour and grain, and whiskey and lumber, awaiting shipment to New York. They had formerly been floated down the river on flat-boats in tierces and barrels to the 'Landing,' at tidewater in New Brunswick, and there loaded on a 'periauger' for New York. But since August of the previous year no shipments of any kind had been made, as all tide-water approaches to the city were in possession of the British fleet. Besides the general 'killing,' as it was called, had just been finished, and the beeves and hogs, and other animals designed for the next year's supply for domestic use, had just been laid down, and so, what had never before occurred in the history of the settlement, there was now the product of a whole year's labor stored up. Surely a providential supply for a great necessity which no human wisdom could have foreseen.

"That these facts were all thoroughly known and the gravity of the situation realized is attested by household traditions and the talk common among members of the family. When Jacob Van Dyke, a brother of my great-grandmother and a member of the Committee of Safety, expostulated with her and my great-grandfather, on the ground that the coming of Washington and the army would surely bring the British in pursuit, she replied: 'That shall be as God wills! We are no better to suffer than others.'

"So, within an hour after Washington's arrival at Princeton, the Committee was on its way, and as General Washington and his staff rode up to Dyke Joline's Tavern, he was at once waited on by them and made acquainted with their fears. After a brief consultation with his staff, and a few sharp questions to the Committee, who were at once endorsed by the principal men of the place, he decided to go to Millville; so, leaving one of their number as a guide, the rest of the Committee hastened home to make the necessary preparations; and before noon the hamlet was ablaze with excitement and activity. All the men and women, not only on our place but all the nearest neighbors, as well as the slaves, were set at work as they had never worked before. Soon the old Dutch ovens (there were four of them) were roaring hot, and bread and pone, and shortcake, as well as mince and other pies, and great rounds of beef, and hams of pork, and sausages, and poultry, were baking and roasting, and stewing and broiling, and frying and cooking, to feed the General and his staff; because on this occasion great-grandmother declared that she 'meant to bring out all her old Holland silver and her finest linen to make a spread for the General,' whom she idolized.

"It was not for the officers alone, but for the whole rank and file of the army that was coming, that preparations must be made. And so huge bon-fires were hurriedly built, and stones laid in them heated red-hot and white-hot, and, when the frost was melted from the ground, these stones, with a thin layer of clay over them, were placed in the bottom of long trenches, and thus in these improvised ovens the bread, as fast as it could be kneaded and prepared, was baked for the army. To assist in these preparations the army quartermaster, with a large force of men, with their camp-kettles, army-ovens, and other utensils, was hurried forward, and so, early in the afternoon the whole place began to assume the appearance of a regular camp. And none too soon; for General Washington, as soon as the troops had had an hour or two to rest and snatch a hasty breakfast at Princeton, found that Cornwallis, enraged that he had been so stupid as to despise his foe and allow him to escape while he slept, and fearing for his military chest at New Brunswick, where he deposited his safe with £70,000 in gold for the payment of the troops, and the magazines and military stores for the army, put his whole army in motion, and despatched General Carleton with the dragoons in hot and frenzied pursuit. It was this news brought by scouts that startled Washington and lent wings to his speed; and so, hastily calling his men to 'fall in,' the Continental Army hastened through Queenstown and Jugtown to the river at Kingston, which was no sooner crossed, and hasty orders given to blow up the bridge, than the 'Red Coats' were descried tearing down the hill in full pursuit behind them.

"The delay caused by this diversion of more than half an hour to the British Cavalry gave the American troops time to gain the crest of the Eastern Hill, where they were sheltered by the thick, intervening forest, and, guided by Major Hartwick, the column made a sharp detour to the left, and, entering an obscure wagon road, called in those days 'Feather Bed Lane,' which led north directly across the mountain, they pushed on, as rapidly as their condition would allow, down into the Millstone valley, via Rocky Hill, to Millville (now known as Griggstown). It must be noted here that the British line of pursuit all the way from Maidenhead had been along the turnpike, which was the only route they knew. And under the most urgent orders from General Cornwallis they were to hasten with the utmost speed along this route to New Brunswick, and rescue their valuable stores at that point, which had been left unguarded.

"Meanwhile the American troops, who had been drawn up behind their cannon at a rocky defile a short distance in the woods, hearing the dragoons with their light artillery go thundering down the 'Pike,' and realizing their safety from immediate pursuit, with a great sigh of relief quickly fell in line, and the news of the rest and refreshment awaiting them in the valley below quickened their march and they soon covered the distance. It was between two and three o'clock that the van-guard came in sight of our old home. The officers had already dismounted and were being most hospitably entertained. But it was near morning of the next day before many of these poor, sick, wounded, bleeding, footsore heroes straggled in. Some had died upon the road and were buried at Kingston and Rocky Hill. A large number died at our place and were laid away in our own family cemetery above the mill. The rest were cared for. All were treated with good, hearty, substantial food, and ample rations of whiskey for such as needed stimulants.

"I wish I might picture that old Dutch mansion, now the temporary headquarters of the army of the Revolution, with its gambrel roof, and its projecting gables, and dormer windows, and wide halls, closed with double-doors at either end. The main hall, running the entire depth of the house, twenty feet wide and forty-five feet long, with its immense fireplace, and quaint stairway opposite, was used as the dining-room. Here two large mahogany tables were joined and spread with the old Holland silver and delft, and the snowy, homespun linen, and loaded with the best the cellar, the store, the mill and the farm could supply. According to the Holland custom 'grace' was said by my great-grandfather while all were standing. Then this distinguished company sat down to dine. During the meal many toasts were proposed and drunk. . . . As the meal was drawing to a close the Commander-in-Chief proposed a toast to their honored host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Van Doren, for their generous hospitality to the officers and to the entire army, and this toast my great-grandmother insisted should be drunk in 'tea,' to the merriment of all present, and then this remarkable array of officers adjourned from the table.

"But the scene around the 'old liberty pole' in the yard and about the buildings and grounds outside was even more impressive, where the rank and file of the army had gathered into camp and were awaiting their supper as fast as it could be prepared and served. About the huge bon-fires, and wherever a table could be spread inside the buildings and sheltered nooks, they were loaded with hot meat and fresh bread, and an abundance of vegetables and cider, and hot coffee, and even 'tea,' 'that obnoxious contraband of war,' of which my great-grandfather had secured a large consignment before war was declared, were served out with generous measure. For no one, as great-grandfather declared, had better 'title to the best' than the men who had just riskd their own lives and liberty for the great cause of Independence for us all. . . .

"One of the most dreadful of the sources of suffering of the soldiers was the universal destitution of proper clothing to shield their frozen feet and almost naked bodies from the weather. In proof of this was a curious incident much dwelt upon by my great-grandmother which is worth the telling. In the early dusk of that memorable afternoon, she noticed some men acting suspiciously at the rear of the house, where they had no proper business, and as she watched she saw them approach an arbor at the back door, where, upon some low bushes near the house, had been hung for safety and concealment a portion of the family wash. She waited until she saw them appropriating some woolen socks and stockings, when she could no longer stand it, and, rushing out, seized the articles in question, in the attempt to regain possession of her own property. But as the men were loath to give them up, a violent altercation ensued and an outcry at once arose. In the midst of this unseemly commotion who should appear in the doorway but the tall form of General Washington himself. With his face blazing with wrath he sent the intruders away with severe reproof. And as my great-grandmother turned to thank him, she saw the tall form swaying with emotion, and, with the tears coursing down his cheeks, he said: 'Oh, Madame, the most bitter sorrow one can ever know is to look upon the sufferings of brave men that we are unable to relieve.' Great-grandmother stood a moment as if stunned; and then, when the full meaning of those pathetic words burst upon her, she rushed into the house, and, calling a couple of her women, went into the attic, and soon her stores of spare clothing, of wool and linen and tow, were unpacked, and laden with all they could carry, they took these precious stores out to the sick and wounded soldiers, who crowded around. . . .

"As General Washington was taking his leave, after most earnestly thanking great-grandmother for all her kindness and hospitality, he handed her the following:

'Millville, January 4, 1777.

'All officers of the American Army will accord to Mrs. Abraham Van Doren, and the women and children of her party as well as their slaves, free and convenient access through the lines, together with such goods and chattels as they may wish to remove to a place of safety during the continuance of hostilities of this campaign.

'And, further, in case the above order should come under the purview of Generals Howe or Cornwallis or other officers of the British army, it is the earnest request of the General commanding the American Army that these women and children, who are non-combatants and have committed no act of hostility to the British cause, but have displayed the most humane and hospitable treatment of the sick and wounded soldiers of both armies, at their own home, be accorded such courtesy as their conduct deserves, and their condition seems to demand.

'GEORGE WASHINGTON,
'Commanding the American Army.'

"A surgeon was left in charge of the sick and wounded with the negro women as nurses, and a squad of mounted engineers were to destroy the bridge below the mill after the cavalcade had passed and as soon as the 'Red Coats' should make their appearance. It seems, however, that it was not until Sunday morning following, the 5th instant, at about nine o'clock, that the enemy were discovered in force coming down the Rocky Hill road; and, although the wagons had been loaded and the teams harnessed ever since General Washington had left, everything was in terror and confusion in a moment. The women and children were hastily assisted into their places, and the negro drivers, with much clamor and fear, urged the teams of mules (the horses had all been impressed for the cavalry and artillery by the American Army), and the wagons clattered across the bridge, which was at once blown up.

"It should be noticed here that among the families thus joining in flight were a number of refugees from Millstone, where the British had made frequent incursions from their post at New Brunswick for plunder, and had frightened them into seeking our house for safety. Among them was the family of Garret Terhune, Esq., whose infant daughter, Catherine, afterward became the wife of my grandfather, Abraham Van Doren, and from whose lips I so often heard the narrative.

"Thus it was for an act of highest patriotism and duty that these helpless women and children were driven out from their peaceful and beautiful homes as fugitives by the brutal British soldiers, with the prospect of losing not only the goods they were thus removing, but everything else they were forced to leave behind of value to them in the world. These negro slaves were urged by the soldiers, as well as by their mistresses, to hasten their utmost to reach a place of safety as soon as possible. But a singular spirit of obstinacy and insubordination seemed to have taken possession of these negroes, which, as soon as the soldiers had left them, developed into evidences of intended treachery which great-grandmother was slow to believe. But too soon, alas! was she to learn the truth in a most serious and unexpected manner. As they were nearing the base of the mountain, where the women had expected to take shelter, they discovered in the distance, coming down the bridle path which led from Princeton and Pennington, a squad of British mounted dragoons. There was still ample time for them to have gained the fort, and great-grandmother coaxed, urged, and commanded them to hasten and drive on faster and save the party. But these treacherous blacks not only continued to loiter, but actually stopped in the road and basely surrendered these forlorn, terrified, indignant women, to their exultant captors! . . .

"When these dragoons had reached the wagons and dismounted to inspect their plunder, my great-grandmother, seeing that there was no commissioned officer among them, but only a sergeant in charge, protested vehemently that she would report them to General Cornwallis, as she had a safe conduct to him, and, showing her papers to the sergeant, she demanded to be conducted to Cornwallis. Although they were loath to lose so rich a prize, they realized that any violence might be severely dealt with; so they hastened with the cavalcade to Millstone, where the whole British Army had been ordered to rendezvous at the court-house by noon of that day. About three o'clock they entered the village and there found Generals Cornwallis and Clinton with about twelve thousand British and Hessians drawn up about the court-house awaiting the result of the council of war convened to decide the question of following the Continental Army to the fastnesses of the mountains, or of returning to their quarters at New Brunswick. It was at the close of the session of this council that the scouting party arrived upon the scene, and at my great-grandmother's insistent demand they were ranged up in front of the court-house, where the officers were sitting. Hearing the commotion outside, General Cornwallis inquired the meaning of the demonstration. Being informed of the leading facts, and that a woman seemed to be in charge of the party who had a paper addressed to him, he came to the door and asked to have her pointed out. Upon hearing her story, and reading the safe conduct addressed to his clemency, he inquired of some of the residents of the village if they could identify the woman and vouch for her statements. There were many present who hastened to do so, and volunteered so many additional particulars of her care and nursing of some of the sick and wounded prisoners of his own command only a few days before, that he was highly impressed with her character and worth. He immediately gave orders that she be returned to her home, without molestation. Upon this my great-grandmother recounted the treachery of the slaves and affirmed that, as they had betrayed her, and had also made threats of personal violence, she was afraid to go home with them. Upon this he turned to the blacks and threatened to have them shot by his soldiers if ever such tidings of their conduct reached him. He also detailed an officer with a file of cavalry to escort them back to their home at Millville, with strict orders that in case of any treachery to my great-grandmother they should be shot down at once. Then, turning to her, he asked her how it was that they were without proper escort of their own men; and asked her where was her husband? To which she with great spirit replied, 'He is where every good man and true patriot should be. He is fighting the battles of his country.' Without a moment's hesitation General Cornwallis said: 'Your sentiments, Madame, are most worthy and do you infinite credit,' and, removing his cap, he continued by wishing her a safe journey home, saying he should do himself the honor, when in her neighborhood, of calling to pay his respects and to test the hospitality of which he had heard so much praise. Thus ended one of the most interesting and curious incidents of the War: my great-grandmother claiming that she had gained the friendship of both armies."

APPENDIX V.

Descendants of Simon Wyckoff and Alche Van Doren (114).

The descendants of the above pair are so numerous that I have thought best to carry down this line, so far as practicable, in this place.

The first Wyckoff immigrant was Peter Claes Wyckoff, who emigrated from Holland in the year 1736, and settled at Flatbush, Long Island, where he became magistrate of the town. His wife was Gretie, daughter of Hendrick Van Ness. He had twelve children.

Peter's second son, Cornelis, of New Lotts, L. I., married, Oct. 13, 1678, Gertrude, daughter of Simon Van Aersdalen, and was one of the company who, Nov. 7, 1701, purchased a 1200-acre tract of land at Middlebush, Somerset co., N. J. Cornelis had twelve children, nine sons and three daughters. Four of his sons, John, Peter, Simon and Jacob, are said to have settled upon the 1200-acre tract, each receiving 300 acres.

Peter, son of Cornelis, who seems to have settled later in Monmouth co., N. J., was baptised, Sept. 14, 1679, and married (1), Sept. 5, 1709 (?), Elizabeth, daughter of Aert Van Pelt, of New Utrecht; and (2) Gertrude Romeyn. He purchased May 20, 1701, 104 acres in Monmouth co., N. J., and afterward more land at Middletown, N. J. He was an elder in the Middletown and Freehold Dutch church in 1709. He died (about) February, 1777, and had children: (1) Cornelius, of New Brunswick; (2) Nellie, who m. John Wyckoff; (3) Aert, who m. Nellie Cruzer; (4) Peter; (5) Elizabeth; (6) Maria, who m. APPENDIX VI.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN A. POWELSON AND ALCHE VAN DOREN (122).

Captain Jacob Powelson came to America from Holland in the ship "Fredenberg," which arrived at New Amsterdam, Jan. 24, 1640. Nicholas Powelson arrived in 1657 in the ship "Gilded Otter" from Ditmarsen, Holland. Gomer Paulison arrived from Antwerp in the ship "St. John the Baptist," in 1681. From these three persons the Powelson families in this country are descended.

Jacob Hendrick Powelson, believed to be the grandson of the Nicholas above named, with his wife and ten children, went from Long Island to Somerset county, N. J. Johannes Powelson, son of Jacob Hendrick, b. 1719, settled along the Sourland mountains in Somerset co., owning a small farm there. By trade he was a cordwainer. He married Harmpje (often written "Horemptje") Messler, daughter of Johannes Messler and Tryntje Neefies, of Middlebush, N. J. (For particulars of the family of Tryntje Neefies, see "Joannes Nevius and his Descendants," p. 624). Johannes and his wife are on the records of the Harlingen Reformed Dutch church which contains the baptisms of several of their children. On May 1, 1767, Johannes purchased of Jacob Vanderveer a farm near Pluckamin, N. J., containing 259 acres. A portion of his house is still standing on this farm. He was an elder of the Bedminster Reformed Dutch church, and at his house there were frequent meetings of the church consistory, as the church records show. He died 1788, and was buried in the Bedminster cemetery. His wife was living in 1789, but the date of her death is unknown.

Johannes Powelson had ten children as follows: (1) John, b. 1746; m. Sophia Barber. Their descendants live in Sussex and Passaic counties, N. J. (2) Cornelius, b. 1748; m. APPENDIX VIII.

NOTE ON JACOB VAN DOREN (1132).

When preparing the matter about Jacob Van Doren (1132) of Sand Beach, N. Y., son of Sheriff Abraham Van Dorn, of Somerset county, N. J., the author was not satisfied as to the correctness of the children, but expected to secure later information and place the same in this Appendix. The only information since obtained, however, is puzzling, to say the least.

A search of the church records of Six-Mile-Run, Millstone and Somerville, N. J., at all of which places this Jacob resided (or apparently so), indicates the correctness of the baptisms given, except that the baptisms of Elizabeth in 1789, and Gertrude Coeyman in 1793, show "Jenney Voorhees" to have been the mother. It is certain, however, from the record at Marlborough, N. J., that Jacob married Ann Nicholas in 1783. It would at first appear as if the Jacob Van Doren who married "Jenney Voorhees" was not the same who married Ann Nicholas. But the son Teunis, baptised 1770 at Millstone, N. J., is certainly on the records as a son of Jacob and "Jannetje," and it is through the family of Teunis that the author obtained the notice of the obituary of Ann Nicholas Van Doren, wife of Jacob of Sand Beach, N. Y., their ancestor. Teunis was Jacob's son; and if so, he must have been a son of a former wife to Ann Nicholas. The record says that wife was "Jannetje" (presumably Voorhees).

The problems presented can only be solved by communications with other descendants of Jacob Van Doren besides those whom I now know.

APPENDIX IX.

AART MARTENSEN DOORN (PAGE 31).

On Dec. 18, 1661, "Aart Martensen Doorn, tailor, young man from Well, in Bommelerwaerd" (an island in Guelderland, Holland), married "Geertruy Andriesse, widow of Janse Stoll, of Dolsburgh, in Guelderland, both residing here in the village of Wiltwyck," (Kingston, N. Y.).

On Jan. 8, 1662, and on Nov. 24, 1678, he is recorded as present at baptisms in Kingston.

On Feb. 1, 1685, he was also a witness at a baptism there, and his name is entered as "Aart M. van Dooren."

In 1682, his wife having died, there is this entry of publication of banns: "Aart Martenz Van Dooren (widower of Gertrude Andries) of Wel in Gelderlant, residing at Kingston, and Jannetie Nimmer (?) (widow of John Sprask), of England, residing in N. Jorck [New York]. First publication of banns, 12 Sept. At her request discontinued by the Court of Justice." It would seem as if this contract of marriage was not fulfilled.

On Nov. 21, 1684, "Aart Martenz Dooren (widower of Geertruyd Andries) of Wel, in Gelderland, residing in Kingston, and Aeltie Lansing (widow of Gerard Slegtenhorst), of Hassel, in Overyssel, residing as above, were married in Horley" [Hurley]. (All above from the "Kingston Ref. Dutch Church Records.")

In 1662, however, he was residing in New Amsterdam (New York City), as the following curious account of a litigation in which he was concerned, taken from the "Records of New Amsterdam," Vol. 4, p. 328, shows:

"Oct. 30, 1663. Schout Pieter Tonneman, pltf. v/s. Arent Jurriaanzen Lantsman and Aart Martensen Doorn, defts. Pltf. demands from defts. each one hundred guilders fine, for that they fought together, so that the blood followed; according to declaration produced thereof. Deft. denies having fought together, but says they had words together; and Arent Juriaensen Lantsman says, that Aart abused him for a son of a dog, which he would not stand. Deft. Aart says he is not aware of having abused Lantsman. Burgomaster and Schepens having heard parties, condemn the defts. in a fine of twenty-five guilders, whereof each shall have to bear half."

APPENDIX X.

SCHENCK-COUWENHOVEN INTERMARRIAGES.

Mrs. Lydia H. Conover, of Marlborough, N. J., who has in custody the Marlborough Ref. Church Records (so valuable for genealogists who seek information as to the early Van Dorn, Schenck, Couwenhoven, etc., families, of Monmouth county), has in her lines of descent the mingled blood of the Schenck and Couwenhovens to perfection. They show how these families intermarried again and again, as did also the Van Dorn families with the Schencks and Couwenhovens. For examples:

1. She was the dau. of Daniel Polhemus Schenck, who m. Mary Conover; he was the s. of Chrineyonce Schenck, who m. Margaret Polhemus; he was the s. of John I. Schenck, who m. Neeltje Bennet; he was the s. of Jan Roelofse Schenck, who m. Sarah Willemse Couwenhoven; he was the son of Roelof Martense Schenck (the immigrant), who m. Neeltje Gerretse Van Couwenhoven.

Covenhoven and Mary Logan; he was the s. of Albert Willemse Couwenhoven and Neeltje Roelofse Schenck, who was the dau. of Roelof Martense Schenck (the immigrant), and Neeltje Gerretse Van Couwenhoven.

Her late husband, Charles A. Conover, could trace his line back, in part, through the same ancestry, to Wolfert Gerretse Van Couwenhoven (also an immigrant) and it does not omit having a Schenck in the list!

Van Arsdale.—Symon Janse, emigrated from the Netherlands in 1653 and settled in Flatlands, L. I. Signed his name Van Arsdalen.

Van Cleef.—Jan, came from the Netherlands in 1653 and settled at New Utrecht.

Vander Hoven.—Cornelis, probably emigrated from Hoven, Gelderland, and settled in Bedford, L. I.

Van Derveer.—Cornelis Janse, emigrated in 1659 from Alkmaar, Netherlands, and settled at Flatbush, L. I.

Van Deventer.—Jan Pietersen, emigrated in 1662 from the Steght, Netherlands, and settled first in Brooklyn and then New Utrecht, L. I. His son Pieter came with him.

Van Duyn.—Gerrit Cornelise, emigrated in 1649 from Zwolle, Netherlands, and settled finally in New Utrecht, L. I.

Van Dyck.—Thomas Jansz, was the father of Jan Tomasse, who came from Amsterdam about 1652, and settled in New Utrecht. His father probably came with him.

VAN MATER.—Jan Gysbertsen, emigrated from Bommel, Netherlands, in 1663, and settled at New Utrecht, L. I., and then Middletown, N. J.

VAN NEST.—Pietersen, emigrated from the Netherlands in 1647 and settled in Brooklyn.

VAN NUIS.—Aucke Jansen, emigrated in 1651 from Amsterdam and settled finally in Flatbush.

VAN PELT.—(See "Lane," above.)

VECHTE.—Klaes Arentse, supposed to have once resided in Vechten, Utrecht, Netherlands, emigrated from Norg, Drenthe, in 1660, and settled in Brooklyn. His descendants are the New Jersey Veghtes.

VLIET.—Dirck Janse, emigrated from The Waal, Netherlands, in 1660 and settled at Flatlands, L. I. Andrian Gerritsen Vliet came from Utrecht, Holland, in 1662.

VOLKERTSEN.—Derick (said to have been a "Norman"), a carpenter, was at Bushwick, L. I., prior to 1648; was probably an immigrant, and, I judge, ancestor to Dirk Volkerse of the Sourland Mountains in 1685, and of the Fulkerson families. John and Philip Fulkerson, of Somerset co., N. J., in 1703; also Richard, who d. 1822, were doubtless of the same stock. "Norman" to the Dutch meant Norseman; so I judge Derick to have been a Norwegian.

VOORHEES.—Stephen Coerte, emigrated in 1660, from Ruinen, Drenthe, in the Netherlands, and settled in Flatlands, L. I. (See "The Van Voorhees Family.")

VREDENBURGH.—William, came over in the "Gilded Beaver," May, 1658.

WILSON.—Rev. George, was a Quaker preacher in Gravesend in 1651, and is probably the ancestor of the Monmouth Co. Wilson.

WYCKOFF.—Pieter Claesz, emigrated from the Netherlands in 1636 and settled in Flatlands, L. I. Frequently spelled Wikoff and Wykkof.

APPENDIX XII.

By an inadvertence, there was omitted, on page 31, the name of a van Doorn immigrant, about whom nothing is known further than the following:

1662. On October 10, of this year, there resided in New York City a Hendrick Clazen van Dooren, as shown by the "Record of New Amsterdam," Vol. 4, p. 145, which states the decision of the court in a suit in which Hendrick was defendant, and Annetje Hardenbroek plaintiff. The plaintiff had Hendrick arrested for a debt, and the record says: "Pltf. demands from deft. thirty planks due to her since two years. Deft. admits the debt, saying no planks have been sawed for a long time. Pltf. replies, if deft. cannot deliver any plank, to pay her in seawan. The W: Court order deft. to pay pltf., the attachment remaining meanwhile valid."

JOHN JACOB POWELSON.

(Appendix VI—No. 7).

Of Pluckamin, New Jersey. Born 1843; living.

APPENDIX XIII.

THE FAMILY PATRIARCHS.

NOTE.—The following list embraces those mentioned in this volume as descendants of one of the three general American lines, who attained to, or, if living, have already reached the age of four score years and upward. With four exceptions, all those named as deceased have died since 1800. It means that there was a distinct increase of longevity in American families in the Nineteenth century over the Seventeenth—a most interesting historical and scientific fact. The hardships of the early settlers were not conducive to long life.

The number succeeding the Christian name indicates where the person may be found under the alphabetical arrangement in this work, or in an Appendix. The second number, following the address, is that of the year of death. The ages given are calculated in reference to the nearest birthday.

Those named as "living" may not all be living at the time of the publication of this work, but, if in any case the record is in error in this particular, it is because such person has not been reported to the author as deceased up to February 1, 1909.

APPENDIX XIV.

JACOBUS, GRANDCHILD OF CORNELIUS (Page 582).

On pages 583 and 585 are references to Alice, dau. of Cornelius Doorn, and I have stated that she was sometimes called "Elsje." Alice died unmarried. As appears on page 582, last paragraph, an "Elsje," evidently a dau. of Cornelius, has a child, Jacobus, baptised. The fact constitutes a geneological puzzle. I do not know in this case that Elsje was Alice, but should suspect, instead, that Cornelius had a daughter of whom we have no account, and, if so, this Elsje is not to be confounded with Alice. Nevertheless, the father's name does not appear. The name of the child, "Jacobus," is properly James. On page 654 it is noted that William Van Doran (2646) is supposed to have been the son of a James, and it is not impossible for a clew to William's origin to be found in this Jacobus.
